TWELVE-MILE ZONE REPORTED WINNING FAVOR IN ENGLAND

Decision on Hughes Plan Due Soon—Mild Hostile Attitude Now Said to Be Sympathetic

British Officials Recognize There Is Plenty of Precedent for 3-Mile-Limit Extension

Special from Monitor Bureau
WASHINGTON, July 24—Officials here are encouraged by reports received from Great Britain to believe that when the reply is made by the British Government to the proposal of Charles E. Hughes, Secretary of State, for recognition of the right of the United States to protect itself against the importation of liquor into its territory through the establishment of a 12-mile limit, it will be favorable to the plan.

While the report of the Inter-Departmental Committee on this and other phases of the liquor question understood to be favorable to the Hughes plan is not binding on the Government, it is not believed that it will be ignored, since in addition to its official character, it is believed to represent British public sentiment, which it is pointed out here, has been changing from mild hostility to sympathy with the American desire to enforce its laws while not entailing unnecessary hardship on other nations in doing so.

Some Misapprehensions
There was a good deal of misapprehension in Great Britain as to the exact nature of the proposal, officials believe. While there is no reason why the true scope of the proposed agreement should not have been perfectly clear to the governments concerned, accompanied as it was by elaborate explanation, many persons in England had the idea that Mr. Hughes was proposing an extension of territorial waters from three miles to 12 miles, and this was extremely distasteful to the British. The impression apparently was fortified by the attitude taken by certain portions of the American press and Lord Curzon's inferences were not entirely accurate. In his address before the House of Lords he stated the facts correctly, it was pointed out, but some of his deductions were not warranted by the facts.

Lord Birkenhead, too, was at first under several serious misapprehensions, especially with regard to certain phrases employed by the Supreme Court of the United States in its recent decision. Lord Birkenhead quoted from that decision, interpreting the court's remarks concerning discretionary powers on the part of the sovereign as meaning that the executive department of the American Government might exercise certain discretion in the enforcement of the law.

The Supreme Court's reference was to the people of the United States, who are "sovereign" under the American political system, and to Congress, through which their will is expressed. Partially Corrected Now
Some of the British got the idea that the controversy over ships' liquor under seal might have been avoided in the discretion of the executive, and that Mr. Hughes was merely trying to bring pressure to bear upon Great Britain to co-operate in the enforcement of prohibition. This misapprehension has been at least partially corrected.

Lord Birkenhead has come out flatly in favor of a convention somewhat along the lines of that proposed by Mr. Hughes, with the notable exception of the three-mile limit so far as other matters are concerned. British officials recognize that there is plenty of precedent for extension of the three-mile limit for certain purposes, as for example, their own claim of jurisdiction many miles out to sea, in the case of pearl fisheries off the coast of Ceylon.

GERMAN COMMUNISTS DISTURB FRANKFORT

LONDON, July 24 (AP)—Reuter's Berlin correspondent confirms reports of Communist disturbances in Frankfurt. He says Dr. Haas, the public prosecutor, was killed yesterday, and that his wife and father were also maltreated.

In response to an appeal from the Social Democratic and Communist parties and the trade unions, about 10,000 persons demonstrated yesterday against "usury and fascism," the Reuter message states. After the meeting of the demonstrators adjourned collisions with the police occurred in various parts of the town.

All the shops, the message adds, were closed.

In view of the seriousness of the situation Governor Noske of Hanover Province, northwestern Germany, has prohibited all open air meetings of any kind on July 29, the correspondent says. This date is the one originally fixed by the Communists for anti-fascist demonstrations.

BOMB OUTRAGE IN ITALY

RENEVENTO, Italy, July 24—The explosion of a hand grenade in the entrance to the hall of the Popular Party caused much excitement today. Two fascists among the number arrested were immediately expelled from the party. Severe measures are to be taken against the culprits by the fascist authorities who deplore the latest outrage.

Country Editors Back Dry Code; Big Fund Voted for Honest 'Ads'

Publishers of Small Newspapers to Carry Prohibition Message to Millions of Readers

Special from Monitor Bureau
NEW YORK, July 24—"There is no question where the small town and country newspaper stands on prohibition," it expresses and will continue to express the spirit of constitutional and law-abiding Americanism; and we are perfectly certain that the small town newspaper is the only one who lead our profession in so many other ways will soon stop condoning law breaking and give this reform a square deal."

Wallace Odell, newly elected president of the National Editorial Association, which just closed its thirty-sixth annual convention at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., made this declaration today to a representative of The Christian Science Monitor.

Mr. Odell, who is editor of the Tarzington (N. Y.) Daily News, said the association now has about 7000 members with a combined circulation of upward of 20,000,000 and purposes this coming year to operate a well-equipped Washington bureau for the benefit of the country dailies and weeklies in its membership.

"The increased penetration of the big city dailies into the country," he said, "has caused small town newspapermen to become better business men and better editors, and they are meeting their obligations. Since the war they have been reasonably prosperous; they have had to raise the rates and keep them up, as labor and all other costs are much higher today."

"The 'Main Street' editor," declared Mr. Odell, "preserves the editorial as a real fighting force in his newspaper, where it has lost much of its effect in the city. His newspaper is expected to be sensational and of a cleaner tone, as it must accord to the sentiments of an overwhelmingly church-going community. In this respect we owe much to The Christian Science Monitor, whose extraordinary foreign service and whose clean influence as regards domestic news cannot be exaggerated as a force for good."

Prize fight news is becoming a ridiculous obsession with the city dailies, said Mr. Odell, adding that his fellow editors, who come from 36 states and as far as Washington, Texas, and Florida, had been amazed during the present convention at the prominence given to boxing bouts and sensational sporting news in the newspapers at their breakfast tables.

BAPTIST URGES DRY

BRITISH EMBASSY

London Delegate to Stockholm Congress Asks Respect for American Law

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, July 24 (AP)—The British embassy at Washington ought to be kept dry, out of regard for American prohibition laws, Dr. J. H. Rushbrooke of London, Baptist commissioner for Europe, told the Baptist World Alliance yesterday.

"The jibes at American prohibition have not come from British and American Baptists, who rejoice in American moral leadership," he said, "and our fear is that we are often too sluggish in following it. Our representatives in America should show decent respect for its constitution."

Because of reports brought to the alliance from Rumania by Dr. Rushbrooke and others, W. D. Upshaw, representative from Georgia, announced that he would go to Rumania and, after making a personal investigation of the alleged persecution of Baptists there, would seek the aid of Congress in remedying the situation.

The alliance is being urged by various speakers to take such action as will arouse governments everywhere to the need of giving to all citizens of every religious belief the right to worship with perfect freedom, according to the dictates of their conscience.

A nominating committee representing all nations is preparing recommendations for the officers of the alliance. C. S. Shank of Seattle, president of the Northern Baptist Convention, presided over the afternoon session yesterday.

If the Baptist women of the world seize their present opportunity for the service of their generation they will adopt as their slogan "Educate the Women of All Lands," Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery of Rochester, N. Y., and former president of the Northern Baptist Convention, told the Baptist World Alliance during its special program, given over to the consideration of women's work.

"When you educate a man you liberate an individual, but when you educate a woman you liberate a family," she declared.

$50,000 FOR STUDY OF FOREIGN FAUNA

WASHINGTON, July 24 (AP)—A traveling scholarship for the study of the fauna of foreign countries was announced today by the Smithsonian Institution, which will devote the interest from a bequest of $50,000 to the project.

The fund was given to the institution by Mrs. Virginia Purdy Bacon of New York, as a memorial to her husband, Walter Rathbone Bacon. Those named for the scholarship, which will change hands every two years, will receive about $2500 a year.

$121,500 Is Dedicated by Clubs to Promote Cause of Truth in Advertising

Special from Monitor Bureau
CHICAGO, July 24—Promotion of truth in advertising is to receive half of the budget of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World for the coming year, the directors meeting here yesterday voting $121,500 for this purpose. It was only eight years ago, at the Chicago convention, that the first appropriation of this nature was made. It amounted to $3000 and was regarded as an experiment.

So valuable has been the clean-up work done under the guidance of the Associated Advertising Clubs that 40 cities have organized bureaus devoted to this end, while the legislators of 37 states have enacted laws to protect the public against fraudulent advertising.

Retail advertising in only two large cities remains bad, while national advertising, which has been very much improved, is being taught in 150 colleges and universities with a few high schools. It was reported from the national education committee, which has plans for better systematization of instruction.

Delegates from America will sail on an American ship, it is declared, and a strong sentiment among advertising men against passing by American vessels to go on a British boat merely because it is wet. The party is expected to number around 1000. Ad clubs are reported signing up members pledged to the trip.

Advertising is being taught in 150 colleges and universities with a few high schools. It was reported from the national education committee, which has plans for better systematization of instruction.

Harry S. New, Postmaster-General, was recommended in resolutions protecting him for excellent work in protecting the public from business fakirs; reduction in rates on second-class matter was asked; the Neosho plan advertising club was recommended to all smaller cities; and standards of practice adopted by the associated retail advertisers were commended to all retailers.

CHINESE BOMBARD AMERICAN VESSELS

British Boat Also Fired On—Mining Engineer Captured by Bandits

I-CHANG, Hupeh Province, China, July 24 (AP)—Steamers arriving on the Yangtze River from Chungking report that the American steamship Alice Dollar and a British vessel under escort of the American gunboat Monocacy, were heavily fired on near Chungking. The Monocacy, according to the report, returned fire, doing considerable damage.

PEKING, July 24 (AP)—Chinese bandits have captured Darcy Wetherbe, a British mining engineer, near Chifu-ho, Province of Yunnan, according to a report received by the customs commissioner here today. Mr. Wetherbe formerly was a resident of Peking.

CANTON, July 23 (AP)—Previous to the recent capture of Wuchow by the Constitutionalists, the United States gunboat Pampana, while patrolling the West River, among other American interests, was fired on by artillery and rifles at Dosing, 27 miles below Wuchow, by Kwangsi troops, although the ship was flying two large American flags.

The Pampana returned the fire of the Kwangsi. Some difficulty was experienced in maneuvering the ship. The action lasted about 10 minutes. There were no American casualties.

An apology for the attack was demanded by Lieut. Leland P. Lovette, commander of the gunboat, and given by the Chinese. Lieutenant Lovette last week brought peace to this section of China for the first time in months, by acting as an intermediary between the forces of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, southern Constitutional leader, and the Kwangsi army under Shum Hung-yung.

AMERICAN TO DISCUSS EMIGRATION IN ITALY

By Special Cable

ROME, July 24—James J. Davis, American Secretary of Labor, arrived here yesterday to discuss the emigration problem with Signor Di Micheli, Italian emigration commissioner. The Italian Government is seeking to obtain the admission to the United States of a certain number of skilled laborers in addition to the contingent or quota already established, in order to reduce the number of Italian unemployed.

There is, however, great difficulty in the way of any such arrangement, owing chiefly to the opposition of American trade-unions to an increase in the number of immigrants.

REICH RESISTANCE MUST BE GIVEN UP, MAINTAINS FRANCE

Cabinet Examines Baldwin Note—Countries Still Far Apart—Attitude of Belgium

By SISLEY HUDDLESTON
By Special Cable

PARIS, July 24—The French Cabinet met today for the preliminary examination of the British draft note. It had been studied minutely yesterday by the Premier, Raymond Poincaré and M. Seydoux. The Belgians on their side considered the text, first the Premier, M. Theunis, and Henri Jaspar taking it up, and then the whole council of ministers. It was not at today's Cabinet meetings that decisions could be reached. It is at the weekly ministerial council under the presidency of M. Millerand that the government will make up its mind. For the moment, therefore, it may be said that the ministers have merely taken cognizance of the British note.

Yves Le Trocquer, Minister of Public Works, who particularly is charged with the technical organization of the Ruhr occupation, exploitation, returned in time for the meeting and gave an account of the progress made which was held to refute the suggestions recently made that the Ruhr enterprise is a complete failure. So far as an agreement with Belgium is concerned, it is believed that there will be little difficulty. A certain delay is, however, inevitable and as the British Parliament rises next week, it is doubted in some quarters whether the negotiations will be concluded in time to know the result of Stanley Baldwin's initiative.

France Not Anxious to Hurry

France and there it is hinted in a knowing manner that the French are not anxious to hasten the proceedings, because they believe that Germany is about to collapse. According to this theory, they would prefer a clean-cut capitulation even without the advice of England to Germany to surrender. There is a sense in which it is true that the French would wish, though ready to come to an accord with England, to relegate all discussion until such a moment as Germany has abandoned its resistance. The British view is however different. It is urged that time presses, that if there is further delay Germany will not so much capitulate as collapse into ruin and anarchy. It is to avert this event which is calculated to have terrible consequences for Europe generally, that the British would deprecate dilatory tactics. If a few weeks are allowed to elapse without any concessions being reached, then the British note will be antiquated and useless. The opinion attributed, rightly or wrongly, to M. Poincaré is that Germany cannot hold out for more than three weeks longer; a month would be the utmost limit. Everything depends, therefore, on what is the objective.

Dramatic Possibilities

If it is to save Germany and obtain a reparations settlement there is no time to be lost. If it is chiefly to obtain a political victory, then delay might even be desirable. That is how the different parties regard the situation, which is certainly full of dramatic possibilities. But it is unfair to accuse M. Poincaré of Machievellian designs when everything points to his hastening the present negotiations.

In their very nature, however, they may be long. If when the vital interests of France are at stake France proceeds cautiously, no reproach can be made, though it would be indeed unfortunate if during the conversations with Brussels and London, Germany begins to disintegrate. At the present there is a considerable distance between the French and British view. The first examination of the British communication seems to give the following result:

1. England holds that the Ruhr enterprise is bankrupt. France declares that it is entirely successful, but only as a means of pressure, but as a productive pledge.

2. No Bargaining Over Resistance
It is impossible for France to accept bargaining on the subject of passive resistance. No promises can be made, although France is anxious to have it understood that if Germany ceases its resistance, France will spontaneously change the character of the occupation.

3. The 1921 schedule of payments must be maintained until France knows precisely what is claimed from France by England and America. It is not that France wishes to keep the German debt so high, but it is felt that there should be a possibility of transferring the Anglo-American claims on the back of the Reichsbank.

DAKOTAS TO BACK MR. HARDING IN 1924 UNLESS RADICAL RUNS

Both States Dry, but Insist Nation Do Something About Prices—Nonpartisan League Seen Waning

By FREDERIC WILLIAM WILE

FARGO, N. D., July 24—Though geographically, ethnologically and economically as alike as two peas, North and South Dakota present strange political contrasts. North Dakota has had some dealings with the Nonpartisan League. South Dakota on the other hand has escaped. "Townleyism" stopped at its northern border, and while the Laddes and the Frasers were busy in North Dakota, South Dakota remained calm, stalwart and Republican.

With its two northern neighbors, North Dakota and Minnesota, now represented in the United States Senate by Farmer-Laborites of the La Follette school, South Dakota is not so sure of itself as it was, say a week ago. The damming star of Magnus Johnson had not yet burst upon the northwestern horizon. Today, tomorrow, next year—nobody even in South Dakota is sure what might not happen.

The Nonpartisan League is on the scene. Its candidate for Governor in 1922 polled 40,000 votes to 48,000 for the Democratic nominee, and 60,000 for the victorious Republican. There are South Dakotans who feel that if farm conditions do not improve some radical leader may arise and exploit rural discontent to the undoing of the existing political order.

Senator Thomas Sterling, Republican stalwart, comes up for re-election in South Dakota in 1924. Despite his

BRITISH CABINET CHANGES RUMORED

Chief Whip to Receive Governorship—Uncertainty as to Reginald McKenna's Movements

By HUGH SPENDER
By Cable from Monitor Bureau

LONDON, July 24—Possible changes in the British Cabinet were the prevailing subject of conversation in the lobbies of the House of Commons last night. The chief whip, Col. Leslie Wilson is to be appointed to the governorship of Bombay when the present incumbent, Sir George Lloyd retires in October. This means a vacancy in South Portsmouth, which the Independent Liberals mean to contest. Colonel Wilson will be succeeded, I am told by Commander Eyres Monsell, who holds the position of Financial Secretary to the Admiralty, while Maj. Boyd Carpenter, who at present holds the signature post of Paymaster-General is spoken of as the most likely successor to Commander Eyres Monsell.

The most interesting speculation, however, centers round Reginald McKenna. I hear on very good authority that it is improbable that he will now join the Government as Chancellor of the Exchequer. In the first place there is the difficulty of finding him a seat. Sir Frederick Banbury does not want to retire, and the other member for the City of London, E. C. Grenfell, is not at all anxious to vacate his place. Mr. McKenna says he will not re-enter politics except as one of the members for the City, for he will not face the trouble of a contested election.

But it is not certain that even if a vacancy could be created for him in the City that the Conservative Association would nominate him as its candidate. The Diehards object to him as a free trader, and have not forgotten his speech at Chicago, when he declared that in his estimate trade was more important than reparations. There is a very wide difference between Mr. McKenna's views and certain city conservatives, although it is possible Mr. McKenna's views represent the majority of the bankers and merchants in the city. Apart from this Mr. McKenna will not surrender his free trade ideas, and requires a pledge from Stanley Baldwin that he will not protect him.

Mr. Baldwin replying for the Government, said that the previous speakers were taking little note of the most serious factor, namely "the fighting instinct" in human nature. He was impressed how, even those who were loudest in the protestations of international pacifism were at the same time the loudest in the advocacy of class war. The Government, he said, believed that an attempt to convene an international conference at this time would not only fail, but do harm. The first step to take was the one the Government was now taking; that was to attempt to settle the reparations. As to disarmament, he called attention to the efforts now being made by the League, and he promised that the Government would examine the proposals sympathetically.

American Plow to Modernize Farming Industry of Turkey

Ottoman Company Contract Calls for 20th-Century Machinery, Instruction Schools and Repair Shops

NEW YORK, July 24 (AP)—A contract to supply American agricultural machinery and to introduce modern agricultural developments in Turkey has been signed by the Turkish Government and the Ottoman-American Development Company, owner of the "Chester" concessions, the company announced today.

The contract, it was stated, is for six years and is guaranteed by the Turkish Government which insures a minimum annual sale of agricultural implements to Turkish subjects of $2400,000, about $1,760,000 at normal exchange rates.

Under the contract, there are to be established repair shops, machinery depots and schools of instruction for farmers who, it was explained, are now using wooden plows. One of the instruction shops will be established on a railway car which will travel through the rural districts.

LAUSANNE TREATY FORMALLY SIGNED; STATE OF WAR ENDS

Great Powers and Turkey Append Signatures—Pact Contains 143 Articles

Jugoslavia Refuses to Sign as Being Harmful to Its National Interests

LAUSANNE, July 24—The Lausanne Peace Treaty formally re-establishing peace between the European powers and Turkey was signed today. The general treaty, formally ending the state of war, was signed by Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan, Greece, Rumania and Turkey.

Jugoslavia announced at the last minute its refusal to sign on the ground that to do so would be harmful to its national interests. The treaty distributes the Ottoman debt among countries like Jugoslavia, which acquired parts of the former Ottoman Empire. Jugoslavia maintains that it is not as a consequence of the general European or Turko-Greek wars. It prefers, therefore, to abide by the treaties of London and Bucharest, which fixed the political status of the Balkans. She has agreed to negotiate directly with the European powers regarding her possible responsibility in connection with the Turkish debt.

The general treaty comprises 143 articles divided into five parts—political, financial, economic, communications and general clauses. The commercial section stipulates the application of the Ottoman tariff, inaugurated in 1916, multiplied by a coefficient corresponding to the depreciation of the Turkish currency.

The great amount of work done by the Near East Peace Conference, of which the peace signed today is the outcome, is indicated by the number of documents it produced. In addition to the general treaty, these include the convention setting up the régime for the Turkish Straits, to which Russia and Bulgaria adhere, and a separate agreement on the frontier of Thrace, commercial and amnesty accords, and protocols of concessions, minorities, judicial safeguards for foreigners and documents by which Belgium and Portugal adhere to certain parts of the treaty.

Mr. Lloyd George Calls Turkish Pact Humiliating

LONDON, July 24 (AP)—David Lloyd George, addressing a meeting of National Liberals, his followers in the Liberal Party last night contended that the coalition Government had succeeded for nine months in preventing the French from entering the Ruhr, but since the present Government came into power, with policy of greater friendship for France "that act of folly has been perpetrated and the economic life of Europe thrown into confusion, while the most humiliating peace with Turkey this country ever signed has been concluded."

FEDERAL POST FOR DR. STANLEY

WASHINGTON, July 24—Dr. Louise Stanley, a native of Nashville, Tenn., and now dean of home economics at the University of Missouri, Columbia, Mo., has been selected by Henry C. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, to head the newly established bureau of home economics of the Department of Agriculture. She will assume her duties Sept. 1.

MYSTERIOUS ORDER ENTERS CLARK CASE

Rehabilitation Official Testifies "Someone" Said Not to Send Pupils to School

Fred G. Elton, in rehabilitation work for the United States Government in New York City, was the principal witness today in the continued hearing given by Col. Julian Codman, for the Senatorial committee investigating vocational work for veterans throughout the country, on the charges of willful breach of contract and unjust discrimination made by Mrs. Anna K. Clark, president of the Clark School of Business Administration.

Mr. Elton, who was in the Boston office of the United States Veterans' Bureau in 1919, said he had directed that veterans' rehabilitation pupils be sent to Mrs. Clark's school, but that for some reason they had not been sent as directed.

"I felt that things were not going right with the Clark School," said Mr. Elton in closing his testimony today, "and I gave the school more than an ordinary amount of attention after I received completed complaints from F. G. Nichols of the veterans' bureau in Washington."

At another time today, Mr. Elton said: "Mrs. Clark's school is of a very high grade. I had arranged to send to Mrs. Clark's school more than a dozen veterans' pupils being sent to her by the Boston bureau would not fit in with her other pupils and I told her that I feared she was undertaking something she should better abandon. But she said she had made arrangements to do the vocational training work and that she was going through."

Source of Report Not Located Mr. Elton admitted that at one time when the question was raised in the Boston office from Washington why the Clark School was not getting pupils when instructions had been sent repeatedly that trainees be sent to the Clark School, "some one had said that men were not to be sent there."

Pressed for the best of his recollection, Mr. Elton said repeatedly that he had tried to find out who had said this but that he was never able to trace the report to an authoritative source. He declared that so far as he was consulted that directions had come from headquarters to send men to the Clark School, especially for primary training for commercial work.

Answering questions put to him by Attorney George W. Reed, of counsel for Mrs. Clark, Mr. Elton said that he had directed investigation be made of the Clark School in Boston and the Reddin School in Roxbury, and found that pupils he had intended should be sent to Mrs. Clark had found their way into the Reddin School. He said that at one time he had ordered these men to be transferred, but that some had refused to go.

Says Primary Training Expected He insisted that he had never received instructions to "fill the Clark School," that such instructions never were issued from Washington to the local bureau, but that he had been told to "send men along to the Clark School." He denied that he had ever received reports that the Fisher or other commercial schools Boston were overcrowded, while there were but few men sent to the Clark School.

FEDERAL OPERATION OF SHIPS OPPOSED

Special from Monitor Bureau

WASHINGTON, July 24—Opposition to direct government operation of the United States Shipping Board fleet was expressed today by Joseph E. Ransdell (D.), Senator from Louisiana, and president of the National Merchant Marine Association. He urged that the board enter into an agreement with private interests to operate the lines, with a view to eventually selling the ships to private companies. The purpose of the law, he said, is plainly against direct government operation.

Failing to find purchasers for the vessels, he said the intent of the law was that the operation agreement should be made with private companies or the ships should be chartered to private interests.

The Shipping Board today took under consideration the proposal of the American Steamship Owners' Association, providing for private operation under contract with the Government, and containing terms upon which the ships would be acquired by private concerns. It was not expected that a decision would be reached before President Harding returns and has an opportunity to examine the plan.

Premiers in Agreement

BRUSSELS, July 24 (AP)—The exchanges of views between Paris and Brussels have developed the fact that the premiers, M. Poincaré and Mr. Thounis, are in perfect agreement on the fundamental questions raised in the British memorandum and the project for a joint reply to Germany's reparations proposals, according to authoritative information.
The negotiations will continue regarding some details, and it is thought here a meeting between the French and Belgian premiers may be required before the final drafting of the replies to the British Government, which will be made separately by France and Belgium.

Germany. It is these two countries which, therefore, are responsible for the maintenance of the C bonds.
4. Whatever other pledges and guarantees over the whole of the German finances, or in respect of particular sources of revenue may be proposed by Germany or England, France will not agree to draw, as it were, the special pledge of the Ruhr in the general pledges.
5. The decision respecting the German debt must never be taken out of the hands of governments or the reparations Commission by any proposed international body.

There appears, even according to the French, some fear that Belgium will abandon some of the fundamentals agreed on with France in order not to offend England, but this would probably only make matters worse.

Brussels Considers Note

By Special Cable

BRUSSELS, July 24—The Cabinet met yesterday to discuss Great Britain's answer to the German note. Brussels considers the project constituting the basis of an agreement and will make efforts to bring Paris to the same way of thinking. Belgium and France, however, want serious guarantees and the cessation of the Ruhr resistance before entering into pourparlers with Germany, and wish Germany to show, by its actions, a willingness to pay reparations. It will not be easy to bring London, Paris, and

FARMERS CONVENE WITH BUSINESS MEN

Co-operation Is Keynote at Amherst Where Food Problem of State Is Discussed

AMHERST, July 24 (Special)—Commercial as well as agricultural interests of the State were well represented at the Massachusetts Agricultural College as "Farmers Week" opened here today. A feature of the first day's program was the special meeting of Chamber of Commerce, Rotary Club and similar business men's executive councils, called by President Kenyon L. Butterfield to consider a food supply program for Massachusetts and the relation of the agricultural college to the food problems of the State.

Various clubs and local organizations made excursions by automobile to the college and inspected the grounds and farm departments. On the agricultural side, today was beekeepers' day, and the Massachusetts Beekeepers' Association helped to make the meetings and discussions in and about the college practical and instructive. The two days' fruit growers' session opened this afternoon.

Poultrymen are ready for the three-days' convention that opens tomorrow, and many farmers are planning to stay for the dairy and field-crops meetings Thursday and Friday. The last day of "Farmers Week," Friday, is appropriately called Connecticut Valley Farmers' Day, with a program devoted to the crops of the valley and the farm management problems of this region.

OIL AND FRUITS LEAD EXPORTS OF ECUADOR

Special from Monitor Bureau

NEW YORK, July 24—Pineapples weighing as much as 25 pounds are among prize products of Ecuador which is fast becoming a great fruit-bearing country, according to Frank King of Esmeraldas, Ecuador, now a visitor here. "Pineapples grow to a weight of 25 pounds in the Province of Esmeraldas," he said. "This is about twice the size of the pineapples grown in Hawaii, and shows that we must have very superior soil."

Indications are that the province has also a considerable wealth in oil. The character of this oil is higher than the famous Pennsylvania oil, and has been produced in Ecuador for the past 300 years, but it is only recently

DYE TRIAL CLOSES; PLEAS IN OCTOBER

Suit Against Chemical Foundation Likely to Be Appealed

WILMINGTON, Del., July 24 (AP)—After eight weeks, the trial here of the Government's suit against the Chemical Foundation, Inc., to set aside the sale of 5700 seized enemy dye and chemical patents sold to the foundation by the alien property custodian in 1919, came to an end late last night before Federal Judge Morris. Final arguments will be heard in October.

Whatever the decision in this court, it is the expectation here that the case will be taken to the United States Supreme Court for final adjudication. The Government charges a conspiracy in connection with the sale and that the price of $250,000 paid for the patents was "shockingly inadequate."

In the normal course final adjudication would require several years, and in that time many of the patents involved would expire. For this and other reasons the Government probably will ask the appellate courts to expedite its consideration.

CHICAGO,

TWILIGHT TALES

A Great Day

IT HAD been a great day. There was the railway train to start with, and when it is only the second time you have ever been on a railway train, that is quite an event. Little James had ridden beside his Uncle James in a long, narrow house on wheels, with an aisle down the middle, like church on Sunday, and the seats looked like pews except that there was room for no more than two persons in each pew. Little James had asked Uncle James if the persons who sat together belonged to the same family, and Uncle James told him that some of them were not even acquainted, which surprised Little James very much. But that is the way people travel in railway trains, and Little James saw it was so when the gentleman in a blue uniform made the train stop, and the street car ran straight into a hole in the ground, and went away without saying goodbye. But it didn't seem very polite.

Uncle James had promised to take Little James to the circus, and Little James lived in such a small town that they had to make a journey to the city when the circus came there. If you have ever been to a circus, you know what it is like; and if you haven't, why, there isn't time enough in this twilight tale to tell you. And although the circus surprised and pleased Little James a great deal, it wasn't the most surprising thing that happened to him. The most surprising and delightful thing was what happened when they were on their way home.

Little James and his Uncle James got on a street car, and hardly had they sat down when the street car went straight into a hole in the ground, and Little James and his Uncle were traveling through a cavern all lighted up with electric lights. They got out in the cavern, and went down a flight of stairs into another cavern, and into another car that had been opened without anybody to open it, and when they got out of that car Uncle James took Little James by the hand and led him to a long, long, long flight of stairs, that went up, up, up, until Little James couldn't see where they were going.

"Now don't try to walk up," said Uncle James, "but just step on the stairs like the man in front of you, than he could count in front of him, and they were all standing still and going up at the same time. It was as much fun as sliding down stairs, only he was going in the other direction. He was sliding up stairs. And when they had gone up and up and up, they came to a place where the stairs seemed to turn over and go right down in the sidewalk, and the man in front hopped off, and Little James hopped off, and Uncle James hopped off—and there they were in the railway station.

"That is what is called an escalator," said Uncle James, "and it is invented to save people the trouble of walking up stairs. You see, the stairs move very much like the chain of your bicycle, only they go up instead of going straight ahead, and so if you step on one place at the bottom and stand still, pretty soon the place you stepped on has moved up to the top, and then you step off."

The Diary of Snubs, Our Dog

BE CHILD'S "PALS," URGES LECTURER

Parent-Teacher Course Advises Mothers and Fathers

"Parents should be pals of their children, the fathers as well as the mothers," declared Mrs. Winifred Carberry, field secretary of the National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations, this afternoon in the second lecture of the Parent-Teacher Association course she began yesterday at Boston University. "I know this seems difficult for mothers of several children, but I do think that women should systematize the work in the home so that they can give more time to their children. I know they can do it. They should get an understanding of time and energy, appreciate their value and eliminate waste. Women need a greater sense of efficiency in carrying out their daily duties." She added:

"It was the old idea that women should be interested in their housework and that was all. But we are told that 'Man does not live by bread alone.' We have got to pay more attention to higher things and we have got to be friends to our children.

"Parenthood is the only profession people enter without training, and that is why there is so much trouble with juveniles. Of the persons in the United States who are in prisons, 72 per cent are under 18 years of age. That proves that some fathers and mothers do not know their jobs. Every father and mother instinctively wants to do right by children, but how can they when they do not know how? The Parent-Teacher Association came into existence to meet a mother's need. That is why it is so fundamental. Mrs. Theodore W. Birney, its founder, felt that she needed aid and reason when she was a woman of education, needed it, there must be others. So she started the first national organization of mothers on Feb. 17, 1897.

After a time Mrs. Birney found that they must include the fathers, and a little later that they must include the school, bringing the home and school into copartnership. More and more the association is getting the confidence of educators. Its national offices in Washington are in the building of the National Education Association. The association had a part on the program of the recent National Education Association convention in San Francisco. More and more the educators welcome the organization, recognizing that the school must have the co-operation of the home if the work of the school is to be a success. The training of the child should begin at birth, Mrs. Carberry said, and the association stresses the study of that period of the child's life. Educators are beginning to see that the training of the child in his pre-school years is very important. It is then that his habits are formed and he is made ready or not for the work of the school. Fathers and mothers should know what the school is like, how it is conducted, its methods of work, school laws and regulations, so as to have an intelligent understanding of what should be done for the child and be ready to help. The Parent-Teacher associations never interfere with the work of the school; that is not its job, but it does strive to bring the home and the school into co-operation.

At the request of the National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations, the United States Bureau of Education has gotten out a home service for the education of parents in child training, and Mrs. Carberry recommended systematic study of the course.

SENATOR FOR LAWS RATHER THAN QUIZ IN COAL SITUATION

CLINTON, Mass., July 24—"I regretted to hear upon arriving home after three months' absence, that the anthracite coal situation is again a critical one, with the prospect that coal will be scarce and high next winter," said United States Senator David I. Walsh, from Massachusetts, this morning. The Senator arrived here last night from New York, where he landed yesterday aboard the Leviathan.

"I still feel," said the Senator, "that Congress made a grave mistake at the last session in not passing substantial legislation, instead of handing over the coal question to a commission for investigation. The commission probably cannot report before the middle of the winter, and its findings can have no effect on the situation as it confronts the people at this time.

"I believed before Congress adjourned that the President should call an extra session immediately to act upon the coal question, and other matters which are of vital importance to the people. It was a great mistake not to do so.

"While in Europe Mr. Walsh met many men of importance in an unofficial way and delved as deeply as possible into conditions over there, especially as they affect the American people. He was convinced that the European people do not care for moral assistance from the United States. More people in this country are worrying about Europe than in Europe itself, he said.

Keith's Theater

Keith's Theater, ever supplying something new in entertainment, presents a satisfying program this week, headed by a classical musical act in which Herma Hegedus, violinist, and Juan Reyes, pianist, win merited applause.

Harry Fox, musical comedy and motion picture star, has a group of popular songs, varied with a whistling novelty and a humorous monologue. In "Blondes," a one-act farce with a cast headed by Chester Clute, both blondes and brunettes find themselves in a perplexing and amusing situation.

Terpsichorean numbers vary from the graceful offerings of Nora Jane and Carl, Danish dancers, to the shuffling novelties of Aaron and Kelly.

"A Manly Revue," presented by Ona Munson, with Shean and Phillips assisting in the dances, combines catchy songs, clever dances, and colorful costumes. The feather fan which Grace Hayes uses so skillfully adds its charm to her group of songs.

A comedy act from the Keith brothers and company, introducing a solo, "When Irish Hearts Are Smiling," and some astonishing contortion work by the Lusters complete the bill.

CONGREGATIONALISTS TO MEET
SPRINGFIELD, Mass., July 24—Discussions concerning the World Court, law enforcement, the Near East situation, the press and international relations, are scheduled for the biennial session of the National Council of Congregational Churches to be held here Oct. 16-25. President Harding, Henry C. Wallace, Secretary of the Department of Agriculture, the Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, Judge Florence E. Allen, and the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick are among those invited to speak. Special commissions on industrial problems and on church co-operation will report.

PROMPT ACTION ON COAL URGED

President Pressed to Emulate Roosevelt—Force Production

Immediate and forceful pressure by President Harding to insure adequate coal supplies for next winter, instead of the calling of a special session of Congress with its customary delay, is urged by Charles Sumner Bird in a telegram to Allen T. Treadway, Representative from Massachusetts, who declared that coal would be selling for $25 a ton next winter unless the threatened shortage is relieved by congressional action. The telegram follows:

You suggest that President Harding call an extra session of Congress to deal with the coal question. That would be a weak gesture. There would be endless talk but winter's frost would overtake congressional action. The situation demands immediate and forceful pressure by President Harding. In a similar crisis Roosevelt told the coal operators that if they refused to deal with the coal question, he would take possession of the mines, dig coal and deliver it, too. Unconstitutional, you may say. That did not disturb Theodore Roosevelt. Get coal first and discuss constitutionality afterwards, was his slogan. It worked, too, and a great calamity was averted. As great a disaster looms in the horizon today. Coal bins are low and winter is not far off. The digging of coal must be expedited and above all railroads must carry it. I am merely a private citizen, but I am confident that I voice the feelings of thousands in urging you to appeal to President Harding to call an immediate conference of the coal operators and miners, and in the name of the American people to order the operators and miners to hasten the digging of coal, working three shifts, if necessary; to order the railroad executives to furnish prompt and adequate transportation, giving coal the right of way over everything except food. If the President heeds your appeal, the coal question will be settled within 90 days. It is an unnecessary expense to debate coal in Congress. We need action and need it now.

ROOSEVELT CLUB'S POLLS WET

In an exceedingly light poll of its membership of about 1800, the Roosevelt Club of Massachusetts, according to the post card returns announced, voted 111 to 80 in favor of modification of the Volstead Act. On the question whether the members favor non-partisan, political candidates, the vote was 90 in the affirmative and 71 in the negative.

MASSACHUSETTS PREPARES BILLBOARD LAW AMENDMENTS

Standardization Purposed—State Hopes for Test Case to Clarify Present Statute

New and more drastic rules for the regulation of billboards and other outdoor advertising are under consideration by the Massachusetts Department of Public Works and will be the subject of a public hearing, open to all interested in restriction of this form of advertising along the highways, to be given at a date to be announced shortly.

While the passage of the Massachusetts billboard regulation law by the Legislature in 1920, it has been administered with a degree of caution and fairness. Public officials have tended to feel their way; building up public sentiment, maintaining an attitude of inviting co-operation from outdoor advertisers, and learning from experience. It is felt that this procedure has been largely successful, particularly in that it has not defeated the fundamental purpose of the act by too precipitate enforcement.

Newton and Milton Made Promises

The act authorizes the regulation of all advertising devices along the public highways within the public view. It empowers the highway department of the Department of Public Works to devise regulations, and provides for a fine of $100 for violation of these rules and $500 in case signs are maintained unlawfully.

Under the regulations a license fee of $50 is collected from all persons engaged in outdoor advertising. No signs can be erected without a permit. None may be placed within 300 feet of a park, reservation or playground. The division is authorized to set aside certain highways and certain sections of highways as places of scenic beauty and to bar the erection of unsightly billboards along them.

It is also provided that cities and towns may enact ordinances or by-laws for the further regulation and restriction of billboards, subject to the approval of the division. In this provision centers the existing issue of billboard regulation. The City of Newton was the first to enact an ordinance. This local statute prohibited the "erection and maintenance" of billboards within the public view in certain specified sections. Newton asked the approval of the division, promising to test the law with respect to its prohibitory features. This was not done. Then the Town of Milton came forward with a set of by-laws for approval and with the same promise.

Divided Authority Criticized

Neither of these communities has seen fit to carry through a program, which, it is decided, would be of inestimable value in the proper administration of the act. It is felt that a test case arising out of action to enforce an ordinance against "maintaining" a signboard already erected would clarify the entire statute and provide a firmer groundwork than now exists.

Considerable question has arisen with regard to the effectiveness of a divided authority in the administration of the act. It is felt by some that it should be a state law entirely, or a matter for purely local regulation, but not both. More than a year ago a number of communities in the State submitted drafts of local regulations for the department's approval. These were imperfect and were sent back in time for action at the annual town meetings, but in only one case has a set of by-laws been revised and returned to the department.

Frank A. Lyman, Associate Commissioner of Public Works, in charge of the billboard law, says that the division is having no difficulty over the regulation of new boards. No new boards are going up on the borders of highways of scenic beauty, he asserts. No bills are being placed on the landscape in communities where local regulations are pending. No unsightly billboards are being reared where there is a reasonable objection voiced.

When the statute was first put into effect, Mr. Lyman says, there were about 10,000 billboards in the State which fell under its provisions. The law does not apply to signs along the routes of railroads if obscured from the highway. Just what the situation is today, the commissioner adds, is difficult to say, but many hundreds of billboard frontage have been lost by building and numerous signs have come down as a result of co-operation between the owner and the commission.

Better-looking billboards are being offered for erection, Mr. Lyman remarks. There is evidence of increasing talent being devoted to this branch of advertising. Historical and educational features are being introduced into billboard advertising, and many of these can be placed where they are not markedly objectionable.

One of the largest complaints pending before the department is that coming from the selectmen of the towns in Barnstable County and the Cape Cod Chamber of Commerce. They ask that the whole Cape highway be set aside as of scenic beauty and billboards barred. The commission made a tour of the Cape to inspect billboard conditions, but has not yet taken action. In fact the petition of these same selectmen and chamber of commerce officials for permission to advertise the Barnstable Fair along the highway has been turned down in view of the pending complaint.

DURANT, INC., HOLDS OPEN HOUSE ON NEW BOSTON PROPERTY

Opening of temporary headquarters on its own ground is being celebrated today by The Durant, Inc., by open houses to all members and friends at the new building opposite the Boston Opera House 336 Huntington Avenue. The reception will be continued until 10 o'clock tonight.

The building, which has been erected for the office use of the Durant, until the real Durant Building shall be completed and ready for occupancy, will contain the offices of the corporation, committee rooms, and a large members' room, where the members and their friends may meet socially and enjoy the comradeship of Durant. This room will be open during the afternoon and evening of every weekday, with a hostess in charge. Here also will be on exhibition the model of the proposed building and development of the grounds of The Durant, prepared by the architects, Messrs. Coolidge and Carlson, which attracted much attention at the Home Beautiful and at Symphony Hall during the Pops season.

In order to obtain the deposition of Commander Dewitt C. Webb, officer of the Civil Engineer Corps of the United States Navy, in connection with the details of building the Massachusetts dry dock in South Boston, James H. Devlin, Assistant Attorney-General, left today for Norfolk, Va.

The claims arise out of allegations that certain conditions of the construction specified in the contract

Plenty of Foodstuffs in Cold Storage

Massachusetts Has 1,862,784 More Pounds Than Last Year

Foodstuffs plenty are in storage in the warehouses of Massachusetts, according to a report issued today by Hermann C. Lythgoe, director of the food and drug division of the Department of Public Health, showing that on July 1 there were 54,353,635 pounds of foodstuffs in cold storage houses, compared with 52,490,851 on July 1, 1922.

Eggs holdings are somewhat higher than usual, the report shows, and poultry holdings are above the average. Butter and meat supplies, with the exception of beef, are somewhat below the average. The per capita holdings on July 1 were 62 eggs, two pounds of butter, 1½ pounds of poultry, two-thirds pound of beef, 3½ pounds of pork and one-fifth pound of lamb.

CANADIAN PACIFIC PLANS OVERSEAS LINE FROM PORTLAND, ME.

PORTLAND, Me., July 24 (Special)—Passenger and freight service between Portland, Liverpool and Glasgow by a line of steamships controlled by the Canadian Pacific Railroad is a strong possibility for the coming winter. Such a line was projected last winter, but, owing to the then uncompleted condition of the State Pier, the plan was held in abeyance.

Representatives of the Canadian Pacific have been in conference with Henry F. Merrill, chairman of the board of directors of the Port of Portland, regarding the enterprise. For more than 12 years the Canadian Pacific has desired a steamship service between Portland and ports in the British Isles, but, owing to the control by the Grand Trunk Railroad of all available Portland piers, entry here was not possible. With the completion of the State Pier, the way is open.

Law—Not War posters, which the committee for international co-operation is distributing for use in the peace promotion campaign, July 23-29, have met with ready acceptance among Boston business houses and in private homes, committee workers report. The posters, which are designed to drive home the idea of the substitution of law for war in the settlement of national disputes, are available at committee headquarters, 101 Tremont Street.

NEW HAMPSHIRE STATES ROAD PLAN

Traffic Changes Said to Preclude Anticipatory Program

MANCHESTER, N. H., July 24 (Special)—"A review of the changes that have taken place in the field of highway transportation and highway improvement during the past decade, demonstrates the impossibility of adopting a program or policy that can be expected to serve the future. Highway problems can be solved only through a continual study of the drastic changes taking place in the methods of construction which have been created by the ever-increasing traffic or highway transportation," was the opinion given by Frederic E. Everett, highway commissioner of New Hampshire, to the Manchester Rotary Club.

Mr. Everett said that the greatest problem confronting the State at the time is to continue with funds available, to build and maintain roads which will stand up under the ever-increasing traffic. Approximately 700 miles of state aid roads already have been constructed, and the State is endeavoring to assist the towns to complete 300 more miles of trunk lines.

With the change of method in financing highway projects from direct appropriations to automobile and gasoline taxes, New Hampshire is faced with a curtailment of funds for highway building, and will be compelled to build more slowly and more carefully. About $7,400,000 was expended on the Daniel Webster Highway alone, but only $2,500,000 will be available this year. With this sum only 50 miles of new road will be built this summer, and 75 miles reconstructed.

Mr. Everett gave two reasons for this decrease in new roadwork: the increased cost of materials and labor, and the necessity for rebuilding at a large cost portions of roads.

While more than 600 miles of road have been treated with oil and other dust-laying compound, the highway commission is utilizing most of its fund to care for the maintenance of the good roads. The surplus is spent on the poor roads, to put them into condition to receive bituminous treatment at another time.

All road work from now on, said Mr. Everett, will be aimed for under a contract system. The town itself is permitted to bid for the work, and in some cases its bid has been accepted. Mr. Everett stated that monthly bulletins were being used from the office of the highway commission, and that next year he hoped to increase the scope of the bulletin service.

Ellis Island Sags Under the Quota for July

JULY took a three-year lease on the American public interest when the immigration quota law went into effect. It begins the new year's allowance and with the first rush—a mere 6000 reached port on the first day—Ellis Island becomes a storm center. And no local storm center at that. If official spleen could annihilate, Ellis Island would long since have sunk into the waters of the bay without a bubble and we would be embarrassed as to which foreign country to blame for it, all the way from Great Britain to Palestine, where the backfire has kindled considerable fire. We assume that the steel mills, for instance, whose arms are so generously open to all Europe, and the housewives who bitterly regret the once mighty flood of domestic servants, could not be responsible for such a deed. Well, here it is on us again and everybody from the Capitol in Washington to the kitchens of Dakota complains about it.

This, the third day, finds savor added to the salt by the presence of a new Commissioner of Immigration. The hope arises in some breasts that he will be more lenient—that is, a little bit less competent—less cautious than Commissioner Tod, who resigned. Newspaper reporters hope that he will be ready from the start with a half dozen wise pronouncements. But Commissioner Henry H. Curran, having been a magistrate, a president of the borough of Manhattan, and a political opponent of John Hylan, remains silent for the present on all debatable points. How thankful the rest of us feel that, although the glory of public office has escaped us, we are at least relieved from the obligation to think before we speak.

Room and Untidiness

The most obviously undebatable point being the matter of room, Commissioner Curran is very definite in expressing himself on this. For all quarters occupied by detention cases this is especially important, but more room everywhere will mean added comfort. It is easier to keep a large house clean than a small one, but does the commissioner fondly hope that his charges will be induced to better their manners thereby? The waiting room whence the immigrants are transported by boat to the railroad terminals is the very peak and summit of all untidiness, and this in spite of four spring cleanings a day. If it were larger, it would simply be a very large dirty place instead of a large dirty place. Bear Mountain, which is very much larger, and the Palisades, after their Sunday picnics, are just as bad.

But overcrowding under the quota was supposedly provided for. No country is allowed to dump its entire quota on us without restriction. Apparently if it could, it would and be done with it. Twenty per cent of the entire quota may come in each month which means that five months will see almost the last of them landed. On the night before the first of July the harbor was full of ships maneuvering to get their passengers in, first as if some special virtue existed in winning the Commissioner to the "chara"—if those are extremes in the order of merit—on the jump. The Fourth of July and these summer Saturday afternoons and Sundays are all spent on the job. If the steamship companies are working on the theory that they will get their passengers through the more easily by rushing them in they are wrong again.

Those who think that the immigrant's first impression of the United States is the worse for getting it at Ellis Island are fond of dwelling on the bewilderment the immigrant feels on finding himself caught in red tape. Bewilderment is the last thing on earth to arise in a situation where he has to come to no decision at all on behalf of himself or anyone else, where he has only to do what he is told. Every adult possesses a certain amount of insight, no one comes to America without having run through that forces families and friends apart, here as elsewhere. Here no family need give up a member unless its own circumstances force it to. All are kept on the island until it is finally established that the detained member may leave with them or must be returned to his own country. In the latter case the family may all be returned together or they may elect which eligible member of the family will return with the ineligible one. One member must return with him at any rate. In an attractive Finnish family recently released one tiny girl in a family of 11 was held over by the physical test, throwing the care of the entire family on the Government for several days. All finally left together, none the worse for their week at the shore as some of us might cheerfully say, while others would shudder and say, "None the worse for a harrowing experience." In extreme cases a necessary for five and six to sleep in a room on mattresses and in beds, but between sheets, be it known.

After seeing the lucky ones go off to meet their friends, all furnished up to make a good impression, the woman's sitting room reveals a let-down in the immigrants' ambition. Some of them have been here a very long time, and boredom has set in with all but the young. They go back to their peasant kerchiefs and sandals, and there is more color here than one can hope to see any more at the Battery landing. Few children are about; they are either upstairs in the kindergarten or out on the playground. Wherever they are, they are probably wondering why their parents do not like Ellis Island. Lonesomeness and boredom are relieved by all the enticing occupations of play, school and kindergarten, drawing, sewing, English lessons, music, games. As any child under 17 is included, much of the interest is, of course, furnished by their own manifold talents. General entertainment is provided by music and motion pictures several evenings in the week through philanthropic societies busy on the island seem to the writer to give the immigrant his only opportunity for bewilderment. What an embarrassment of riches! The Baptists do one thing, the Methodists another, the Congregationalists are over in this cubby, the Roman Catholics, overlapping various Latin aids, are in that one, the Hebrews have a large office, the Y. W. C. A., the Y. M. C. A., the Presbyterians are everywhere here and there, the Travelers' Aids are stationed down the line. The United Charities must be somewhere, even if they are only in the background protesting that they could do it all with half the employees provided they were trained social workers.

Going back to New York on the ferry loaded with half a dozen nationalities, to the Battery congested with their relatives, one realizes that Ellis Island will never be what it was years ago when New Yorkers amused themselves by going down there to look for types. The baggage, to be sure, is just as yellow as ever, but any subway crowd can furnish as great a variety. A New Yorker would find more to wonder at in a New England interurban trolley, and what with the hats and dress boxes their relatives carry over to the island to dress them in and previous directions to put the best foot forward the immigrants do not show the color they did when heads were adorned with kerchiefs, and blankets full of household goods. Indeed, any 100 per cent American had better hurry along or she the red tape in his own country, and almost one might say that a willingness to form a judgment at this stage of experience constitutes ineligibility. Nevertheless, certain visitors of more or less distinction have made their one and only appearance in the newspapers on this subject.

A look through the administration buildings clears up much of the horror of it, though the fastidious, who have never looked down on board ship into the steerage quarters, on going through for the first time may have to grit their teeth and repeat to themselves at intervals that "folks is folks," but again this item in the complaint cannot be laid to the Federal Government.

Not many visitors to New York miss making a visit to Ellis Island. In quiet times it is a simple enough matter to get a pass, but for those who are unfamiliar with the system of shifting the aliens through may be equally possible parting of the ways should be pointed out to a group when passports are requested and steamship tickets bought. A hundred little Ellis Islands in as many countries, even if permitted, Commissioner Curran thinks would be impracticable as multiplying trouble, but it is generally agreed that emigrating families should be better advised at home. Unofficial organizations are already agitating for more rigid inspection abroad.

From the physical test the immigrants pass in a great flood up the stairs into an enormous hall filled with long rows of benches on which they wait in groups of 30 until they are taken in hand meticulously by the examiners. Just as there is no possible speeding up of any single case, so the endurance of the examiners is put to an equally severe test. The steamship's registration of each person is in the examiner's hands and in glancing through them it is noticeable that every man, woman and child has given the name of a friend or relative here. By and by all are tagged, some pass to the left for detention; others go to the right to take the ferry for New York; or if a minor or a woman, to the most interesting corner in the buildings, where they await the relatives who must claim them. This is the famous "kissing post."

Those seeking other destinations than New York pass into the waiting rooms, where the railroad companies take over the care of them. They buy their tickets in this room and begin here to enjoy a little freedom, reverting in all haste to steerage standards. The minors are carefully tagged with their slips indicating destinations, with directions to some official to telegraph their friends to meet them.

When Relatives Meet

As the lucky eligibles are expected to enter and leave the island the same day, all barges must land their passengers before 3 o'clock, in order to insure their getting away by 5. Thus the hue and cry about overcrowding will be seen to apply mainly to the detentions, who keep hundreds of employees working overtime at Washington and at Ellis Island. Provisions made for their detention would make anyone who worked with refugees in Europe in 1914 sigh with envy. Endless wire cut bunks, hundreds of blankets, many showers and tub baths, complete segregation of the men and women and of the warrant and stow-away cases. First and second cabin passengers have separate quarters, which seems right to all who have a chance to look them over and see how the different standards work out, but the many detentions make it sometimes may be mistaken by the waiting relatives for a sister who has grown up. In all the sea of faces an English family is possibly the easiest to place. There is plenty of entertainment, however. There will always be groups of three or four middle-aged men all trying to kiss one another on both cheeks at the same time; there will probably always be Finnish twins, and there will certainly always be a pair of "Are we down-hearted? No-o-o!"

Tagged and Waiting

Special Correspondence

"YES," said Mrs. Marcelle Bach in a recent interview, "it is now 23 years since women were granted the right to practice law in France. We have every reason to be proud of the advance we have made. You must know what obstacles we have had to encounter, for what may be termed the medieval conception of woman still lingers in the minds of many of our men."

"Early in the twentieth century, after a long fight, a special law was passed giving women the right to practice law and become members of the bar. There was no end of trouble and resistance to the passage of this bill, especially from the court."

"And do you know one of the arguments they used against us? It was the story of Cafrani. Cafrani, if you remember, was a woman barrister who lived in the heyday of the Roman Empire. There were, in fact, quite a number of women magistrates in the days of the Romans, a fact which is not generally known. Cafrani was an unusually brilliant orator, but, the story goes that she used her oratorical powers to the extent of her own undoing. She pleaded, and pleaded, and pleaded, until the magistrates asked her to stop pleading."

"M. René Viviani was largely responsible for the passing of the law allowing women to practice at the bar. The first to be admitted was Jeanne Chauvin, whose ability did much to change the opinion of our opponents."

"There are now today in Paris alone more than 100 active women lawyers. Especially since the war women have turned to the profession. And do you know that we have shown such tact, have upheld our profession with such dignity, and have shown such good oratorical qualities, that men in general have been quite taken aback? They are now obliged to accept the fact that women are just as capable in law matters as they."

"Do we confine ourselves to any particular sphere of work? Most certainly not. We accept cases of any nature, but there are many who specialize in affairs of business and have done particularly well in them."

"Now let me tell you about an incident that is a convincing proof of the progress we are making. At the Palais de Justice there are what are known as the Secrétaires de la Conférence. There are 12 of them, and they are all young lawyers who have had less than five years' experience at the bar, but specially chosen from among a great number of candidates, and to be one of these secrétaires is an honor. The conference itself is composed of the most able lawyers and is presided over by the bâtonnier, who is the head of all the lawyers in Paris. The present bâtonnier is Albert Sallé."

"A year ago last June, for the first time, a woman, Miss Jeanne Rospar, was elected one of the 12 secrétaires. This year a second young woman was elected: Miss Lucile Tinayre."

"Among our most prominent women lawyers are Maria Verone, the feminist leader, Suzanne Grinberg, Helene Landry, daughter of the former Minister of Marine, and now vice-president of the Chamber. Then there is Suzanne Tailleur, who is doing fine work."

"And what about yourself?" I asked. "Oh, well, you know my heart is bound up in the feminist movement, and that outside of my law practice I devote nearly all my time to the cause of woman suffrage. It will not be long now before justice will be done to the women of France."

Mrs. Marcelle Bach is general secretary of the Paris Group of the Union Française pour le Suffrage des Femmes and also vice-president of the Groupe Universitaire for the League of Nations.

By the third of July this year nine countries had filled their percent—including Greece with 613 and Turkey with 531. For this some of the steamship companies are to blame. Commissioner Curran thinks the steamship companies should get together and adjust their rivalries instead of taxing the island to the hilt of endurance.

The Cost of Detention

The general helter-skelterness of the arrivals piles up the detention cases, necessitating beds and meals. Time was when 5000 could go through the island in a day and did—before the war. "It is quick work when only eligibles are considered, the system being down to the finest working point. But every ship adds a hundred or so to the detentions and as there are many left over from last year's appeal cases, it took only a few days this month—counting 2000 landings a day—to reach the capacity of the sleeping quarters, 1800 beds. Well, beds and meals at the least of their troubles at the island but the office work necessary on most of the detention cases keeps the employees on the jump. The first two weeks of this month will keep the whole staff from

SUFFRAGE SPREADS IN SOUTH AMERICA

But Wives Still Need Husbands' Assent, English Woman Says, to Enter Business

Special from Monitor Bureau
LONDON, June 20.—"Compared with the women of North America," Miss Mary Sheepshanks, speaker and social-worker, recently returned from studying woman's position in Argentina, Chili and Uruguay, told a representative of The Christian Science Monitor, "the women of South America are not nearly so well known."

Interests Are Narrow
"Looked at as a whole, the woman's movement in South America gives rise to disappointment. South American women possess great beauty, charm and grace, and are perhaps the best dressed women in the world, but the old Spanish-Moorish tradition of secluded idleness imported by the original colonists, still dominates the social life of the continent."

Continuing, Miss Sheepshanks said: "Leaven, however, is working in practically every one of the republics—small, but active undercurrents, led by a handful of noted women, and these mostly of Italian, Spanish, or other European origin."

In Uruguay, for instance, the most advanced Republic in South America as regards woman's political status, there is a keen group of progressive women under the inspiring leadership of Dr. Paulina Luisi, an Argentine of French and Italian parentage, who is now in Uruguay to graduate for the B. S. degree.

University education is free in Uruguay, and legislation, especially where women are concerned, is more advanced than in any other part of the continent. This may possibly be due to the fact that Uruguay has a feminist president, Dr. Baltasar Brum.

Husband's Consent Needed
In the three countries visited by Miss Sheepshanks married women have no civil rights. The mother has a right to the equal guardianship of her children with the father, but no property rights. A married woman may not act as witness, nor exercise a profession without her husband's permission. She continued:

Another noted woman leader in the Argentine is Dr. Lanteri, who is standing for Congress and who is the only woman in South America who conducts street meetings.

In the Argentine, Dr. Alicia Moreau is one of the most noted feminists. She is editor of the Argentine review, Humanidad Nueva (New Humanity), and a tireless social worker in behalf of various public health measures for the working classes.

Women at University
In Chili, Señora Labarca-Hewson, a gifted teacher and writer, has considerable influence in the more progressive circles.

Brazil also has an active woman's movement, led by Dona Bertha Lutz, of Rio Janeiro. She is founder and president of the Brazilian League for the Emancipation of Women, and one of the most active feminists in South America.

Dona Lutz is secretary of the National Museum, a position won by competitive examination. Mainly owing to the league of which she is president, the University of Rio de Janeiro has thrown open to women all positions on its teaching and executive staff.

"Although," she said, "of progressive women in South America is comparatively small," Miss Sheepshanks concluded, in summary, "there are certain hopeful indications for the future. The number of women lawyers, teachers and engineers is increasing, and this, together with the breeding influence of North America, and the attraction of French culture, are hopeful factors in the future progress of the South American woman."

DR. BUTLER IS TOLD OF BRITISH AMITY

Task of World Today, He Says, Is to Put People Under Law

Special from Monitor Bureau
LONDON, June 30.—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, New York, holder of the Watson Chair in the English universities, and missionary in the cause of Anglo-American friendship, was the guest of honor at a dinner of the Pilgrims at the Hotel Victoria on the anniversary of the signing of Magna Charta. Lord Desborough presided over a large and distinguished gathering.

H. A. L. Fisher in proposing the toast of "Our Guest," intrusted to Dr. Butler the following message to his countrymen:

"We are not content with the purely passive friendship with the great Republic of America, but we desire cordial creative co-operation in all the great tasks of the world, and which the common efforts of two great liberty-loving communities will enable us to surmount and solve."

Responding, Dr. Butler said that in modern civilization, and particularly in such civilizations as those of Great Britain and the United States, no government, however authoritative, popular, or well established, could ever fully represent and express the soul of the people.

Dr. Butler, discussing Magna Charta, as briefly described in a cable to The Christian Science Monitor, said that this grant put a King under the law, whereas today, he said, the one great task before the world was to put the people, whether organized in minorities, or whether expressing themselves in majorities in representative fashion—to put the people themselves under the law. If in 1215 it was a tyrant with a single head, in 1923 it might be a tyrant with many heads, but none the less a tyrant unless they put it below the law and kept it there.

PAY RISE GRANTED RAILROAD WORKERS

CHICAGO, July 24.—Signal department employees on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company and the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh Railway Company received increases in wages it was announced by the two carriers through the Railroad Labor Board. The increase granted amounted to 3 cents an hour and is retroactive to July 15 on the Lackawanna and July 16 on the other road.

Representatives of the Brotherhood of Railroad Station Employees have negotiated satisfactory wage increases ranging from 3 to 4 cents an hour for station employees on the Boston Terminal Company the board also announced. The increases were effective July 20.

Some say it has turned the corner and henceforward will operate at a profit, while fulfilling its purpose of giving the farmer better prices for grain and cheaper flour. Among mill boosters is Jerry Bacon, whose model farm, "Lilac Hedge," abuts the state mill. Down state they are less content and declare the mill will turn out to be, like other nonpartisan projects, an expensive and hopeless experiment.

Although one is assured on many hands in North Dakota that the Nonpartisan League and the Farmer-Laborites are practically synonymous, politically, are "through," the conditions continue to a very large extent. The farmers are "up against it" in North Dakota, as everywhere else in the west. They have precisely the same grievances—the grievances that caused them to grasp at the radical straw, "Townleyism," held out to them six or seven years ago.

They are paying peak prices for necessities, and getting rock-bottom prices for their own products. They have a grudge against the Government for stimulating agricultural production during the war period and then "letting them down" in the deflation period. The farmers assert they have not had a square deal at the Government's hands.

AMERICAN FORESTRY HEAD VISITS ENGLAND

Special from Monitor Bureau
LONDON, July 3.—Ralph Hayes, European commissioner of the American Tree Association of Washington, has arrived in England and will confer with Lord Lovat of the British Forestry Commission regarding the handling of the fourth shipment of American tree seeds being sent over by the American Association.

The shipments this year will contain only seeds of Sitka spruce, as none of the Douglas fir seeds are available, due to the failure of the crop in America last year. As a matter of fact, Lord Lovat has informed Mr. Pack, president of the American Tree Association, that the Sitka spruce is particularly desired. The Douglas fir gave most unexpected satisfaction, but it is anticipated that results with Sitka spruce will be equally gratifying.

emergence, across the state line, of Henrik Shipstead plus Magnus Johnson.

Jerry D. Bacon of Grand Forks, pioneer crusader against the Nonpartisanites, declares they are "through."

He says that patriotic Republicans and Democrats, however, still need to remain on the watch-tower, because farm discontent is rife and raw material for political incendiaries is plentiful. But North Dakota, according to Mr. Bacon, has had its fill of Nonpartisan panaceas, has paid a costly toll for the experiment, and never again will hand the State over to the organization.

It appears that Lynn J. Frazier's election to the Senate in 1922 was due to local conditions, and in no wise denotes that North Dakota has embraced the League. Senator Porter J. Mumbe (R.), might have been nominated and re-elected except for certain unpopular federal appointments which he instigated and for his flirtations with the Nonpartisan crowd. Then the Democrats made an unfortunate nomination in opposition to Mr. Frazier, who had wrecked the regular Republican nomination from Mr. McCumber.

Religion in Politics

The religious note entered into the campaign, and, because of a combination of factors that had little to do with the nonpartisan movement, Mr. Frazier was elected. At the same election the state administration was recovered by the stalwarts, R. A. Nestos, a Republican, being elected Governor. Thus the phenomenon, inexplicable in the east, of a "recalled" nonpartisan Governor, Mr. Frazier, being promoted to the seat of honor, year later, is in reality not what it appears to be. "Tell 'em in Washington," was Jerry Bacon's parting salutation to this writer, "that the North Dakota Bolsheviki are licked out of their boots."

Mr. Bacon's cry of triumph is justified. North Dakota may well chant halallelujah, for its little fling at the millennium, via the nonpartisan route, cost the State between $15,000,000 and $18,000,000 in hard cash. These figures may not impress the plutocratic "east," but to a state with only 750,000 population they represent real money. Of the entire group of socialist ventures in which the people's treasure was squandered, only the state flour mill and elevator at Grand Forks remain, and upon which the taxpayers eventually may cash in.

Wasted are the millions put into the "Bank of North Dakota," now in ignominious liquidation. Gone are the fortunes invested in state-financed homes and dwelling nationalities, the land where the woodbine twined have vanished the subsidies for "consumers' stores." In bankruptcy are the scores of semistate banks, farmer-subsidized newspapers, and all the other projects which were to turn North Dakota into a commonwealth drenched with milk and honey.

Mill and Elevator Survive
As has been said, the state mill and elevator alone survive the nonpartisan deluge. They comprise a remarkable plant, comparing in size and equipment with the finest private-owned milling properties at Minneapolis. Three million dollars of public money are invested in it, a plant that has a capacity of 3600 barrels a day and storage room for 2,000,000 bushels of grain. The property was only completed a year and a half ago. It only recently began to function on a full scale.

Some say it has turned the corner and henceforward will operate at a profit, while fulfilling its purpose of giving the farmer better prices for grain and cheaper flour. Among mill boosters is Jerry Bacon, whose model farm, "Lilac Hedge," abuts the state mill. Down state they are less content and declare the mill will turn out to be, like other nonpartisan projects, an expensive and hopeless experiment.

They have precisely the same grievances—the grievances that caused them to grasp at the radical straw, "Townleyism," held out to them six or seven years ago.

They are paying peak prices for necessities, and getting rock-bottom prices for their own products. They have a grudge against the Government for stimulating agricultural production during the war period and then "letting them down" in the deflation period. The farmers assert they have not had a square deal at the Government's hands.

Expect Government Aid

They are not much concerned with explanations that world unrest, supply-and-demand economics, war aftermath and all that sort of thing are to blame. They are little appeased by assurances that international conditions are such that no United States Government can, by legislative enactment, suddenly reorganize them for the benefit of the American farmer. The farmer has been hard hit. That is all he knows, and he insists that the Administration and Congress get busy on the paramount job of getting him out of his fix. He is impatient with excuses and extenuations. He wants action.

Although President Harding did not tour this section of the northwest on his way to Alaska, his speeches on the World Court, rail consolidation, prohibition, agriculture, taxation and labor were, of course, addressed to Minnesota, the Dakotas, Nebraska and Iowa quite as directly as to the regions he traversed. Mr. Harding was not the choice of the northwest for President in 1920. This was Wood country, or Lowden country, or Hiram Johnson country. Yet it voted solidly for Mr. Harding and, broadly speaking, it has liked him, although one encounters an amazing universality of view that he is too much in the grip of the "east" to be a completely satisfactory President to the west.

Bonus Veto Was Costly
Mr. Harding's veto of the soldiers' bonus cost him some popularity in the west, too. The President's speeches were fully reported in the northwest and widely read, though they do not seem to have attracted people very deeply. It is harvest time and the farmer's interest was attuned exclusively to his crops—and to his manifold tribulations incident thereto.

Both North Dakota and South Dakota expect to send Harding delegations to the Republican national convention in 1924. The President will have no serious rival for them except Robert M. La Follette, and Republicans in both states are confident they can beat Mr. La Follette if there is a show-down in the primaries. Whether Mr. Harding can carry the Dakotas against a third party, headed by Henry Ford or Mr. La Follette, is a matter of speculation. The President's cause would be at least in jeopardy if farm conditions should not take a drastic turn for the better.

No Republican candidate for any office is 100 per cent safe in the west in these times. The G. O. P. is the party in power, and it seems condemned to remain so, but the farmer's disfavor in what Ulysses S. G. Cherry, one of South Dakota's Democratic leaders, jointly terms a period of "grinding readjustment."

South Dakota Prosperous
South Dakota appears to have staved off Non-Partisan League radicalism by timely concessions in the direction of state socialism. It enacted a system of farm loans from the public treasury, established a state cement-plant and even conducts a state coal mine. It furthermore has had the advantage of seeing North Dakota sow its Socialist wild oats, and been able to profit from the example. Bankers at Sioux Falls, one of the most metropolitan of mid-west small-city communities, insist that South Dakota farmers are neither impoverished nor discouraged.

Country banks, even at points remote from a railroad, have millions of dollars of farmer money on deposit. Foreclosure suits are infrequent, and although many borrowers are delinquent for interest and mortgage installments, farmers are apparently far from being "down and out."

South Dakota is no longer an essentially wheat-growing state. As in Iowa, corn has become the big crop. Diversified farming is on the march in the Dakotas. Many authorities think it spells the salvation of the agricultural community. It requires a farmer to keep busy the year round, makes him less dependent on one or two crops, gives him less time to brood over his trials, and generally makes for improved morale. In the spread of diversified farming may lie hidden the solution of many of the northwest's problems—and, as not the least of them, preservation from political radicalism.

emergence, across the state line, of Henrik Shipstead plus Magnus Johnson.

Jerry D. Bacon of Grand Forks, pioneer crusader against the Nonpartisanites, declares they are "through."

He says that patriotic Republicans and Democrats, however, still need to remain on the watch-tower, because farm discontent is rife and raw material for political incendiaries is plentiful. But North Dakota, according to Mr. Bacon, has had its fill of Nonpartisan panaceas, has paid a costly toll for the experiment, and never again will hand the State over to the organization.

It appears that Lynn J. Frazier's election to the Senate in 1922 was due to local conditions, and in no wise denotes that North Dakota has embraced the League. Senator Porter J. Mumbe (R.), might have been nominated and re-elected except for certain unpopular federal appointments which he instigated and for his flirtations with the Nonpartisan crowd. Then the Democrats made an unfortunate nomination in opposition to Mr. Frazier, who had wrecked the regular Republican nomination from Mr. McCumber.

Religion in Politics

The religious note entered into the campaign, and, because of a combination of factors that had little to do with the nonpartisan movement, Mr. Frazier was elected. At the same election the state administration was recovered by the stalwarts, R. A. Nestos, a Republican, being elected Governor. Thus the phenomenon, inexplicable in the east, of a "recalled" nonpartisan Governor, Mr. Frazier, being promoted to the seat of honor, year later, is in reality not what it appears to be. "Tell 'em in Washington," was Jerry Bacon's parting salutation to this writer, "that the North Dakota Bolsheviki are licked out of their boots."

Mr. Bacon's cry of triumph is justified. North Dakota may well chant halallelujah, for its little fling at the millennium, via the nonpartisan route, cost the State between $15,000,000 and $18,000,000 in hard cash. These figures may not impress the plutocratic "east," but to a state with only 750,000 population they represent real money. Of the entire group of socialist ventures in which the people's treasure was squandered, only the state flour mill and elevator at Grand Forks remain, and upon which the taxpayers eventually may cash in.

Wasted are the millions put into the "Bank of North Dakota," now in ignominious liquidation. Gone are the fortunes invested in state-financed homes and dwelling nationalities, the land where the woodbine twined have vanished the subsidies for "consumers' stores." In bankruptcy are the scores of semistate banks, farmer-subsidized newspapers, and all the other projects which were to turn North Dakota into a commonwealth drenched with milk and honey.

Mill and Elevator Survive
As has been said, the state mill and elevator alone survive the nonpartisan deluge. They comprise a remarkable plant, comparing in size and equipment with the finest private-owned milling properties at Minneapolis. Three million dollars of public money are invested in it, a plant that has a capacity of 3600 barrels a day and storage room for 2,000,000 bushels of grain. The property was only completed a year and a half ago. It only recently began to function on a full scale.

Some say it has turned the corner and henceforward will operate at a profit, while fulfilling its purpose of giving the farmer better prices for grain and cheaper flour. Among mill boosters is Jerry Bacon, whose model farm, "Lilac Hedge," abuts the state mill. Down state they are less content and declare the mill will turn out to be, like other nonpartisan projects, an expensive and hopeless experiment.

Although one is assured on many hands in North Dakota that the Nonpartisan League and the Farmer-Laborites are practically synonymous, politically, are "through," the conditions continue to a very large extent. The farmers are "up against it" in North Dakota, as everywhere else in the west. They have precisely the same grievances—the grievances that caused them to grasp at the radical straw, "Townleyism," held out to them six or seven years ago.

They are paying peak prices for necessities, and getting rock-bottom prices for their own products. They have a grudge against the Government for stimulating agricultural production during the war period and then "letting them down" in the deflation period. The London membership is over 700, with several hundred members and associates in Scotland and the provinces, and the membership in America is between 300 and 350. An interesting development in the institution of junior branches. For the third year in succession a Festival of Folk Song and Dance has been held at the King's Theater, Hammersmith. There seems little doubt that this Festival Week has now established itself as an outstanding event in the society's work each year.

The trustees of the Carnegie United Kingdom Trust have offered to the society a grant of £500 a year for three years, this sum to be devoted to the development of the society's work in villages. This offer the committee have gratefully accepted. The educational value of folk dancing, folk songs, and singing games is being increasingly recognized. The president of the board of education presided at the Christmas Vacation School, held in London, and, at a later date, in the House of Commons, referred to the "enormous debt of gratitude the board of education owed to Mr. Cecil Sharp," the society's director. Cambridge University has recently conferred an honorary musical degree upon Mr. Sharp. A scheme for reorganizing the provincial branches on a county basis is now under the society's consideration.

SMALLPOX SCARE LESSENS IN BRITAIN

Fresh Obstacles Placed in Way of Conscientious Objectors

By Cable from Monitor Bureau
LONDON, July 24.—Glooucester's "smallpox epidemic," even according to the admissions of the pessimistic press, is declining. Yesterday it was reported that during the 24 hours ending on Saturday morning there were only two new cases admitted to the isolation hospital, while there were 35 discharges. Since Saturday there were said to have been five admissions and a much greater number of discharges. Nevertheless, the Ministry of Health insists that the vaccination acts are not being "properly administered" in districts where the new forms being issued for notices upon parents or guardians for the vaccination of infants, omit the space for the statutory declaration of conscientious objection. After the new orders come into force on Sept. 1, anyone desiring to register his conscientious objection will be obliged to ask for a special form from the vaccination officer. The law is not thereby changed, but this added obstacle placed in the path of those rightfully seeking exemption will require added vigilance on the part of the authorities to see that their rights by default.

The Anti-Vaccination Society regards this seriously, although predicting that it will serve as a potent stimulant to increased effort by all its active champions.

FILIPINO LAWMAKERS DEMAND WOOD RECALL

MANILA, July 24 (AP)—President Harding's response to a formal demand by the Legislature here last night that Governor-General Leonard Wood be recalled at once, is expected as the next important development in the political strife which resulted last week in resignation of the entire personnel of the Philippine Cabinet and council of state.

The recall demand was contained in a resolution adopted without a dissenting vote at a joint meeting of both houses of the Legislature. All of the parties took part in the vote, which indorsed the stand taken by the Cabinet when its members quit in a body.

Mr. Wood now is in the Province of Samar on an inspection tour.

Turkish Torches Blaze Behind as Refugees Sail to New Lands

From the Golden Horn, Past Salonika and Purple-Topped Athens, They Came to Ruined Corinth

PARIS, June 30 (Special Correspondence).—From the red tresses, red stantipole mobs celebrating Turkish victory, many a ship put silently out, crowded with refugees, to seek new fortunes. From the sight of wild demonstrations of Muhammadan joy as processions, noisy with discharging firearms, pass through the streets, these refugees turn their eyes to the picture becomes unbearable, to the silent gardens of the British Embassy and across the peaceful waters of the Golden Horn—full of little twinkling lights, that are stars of hope for exiles.

Every Corner Filled
What do such people see on their voyage? The ship, filled in every available corner with fugitives, with whom on one such voyage is the correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor, glides away from the port, and men and women sigh relief. They pass Chanak, and lines of British fortifications, where the peace of the Near East has trembled in the balance. They pass Salonika and a day later, where the sapphire Aegean meets brilliant blue skies—come to the purple-topped mountains of Athens and such a harmony of color as only the Grecian capital knows.

On the fourth day the noise of ship's machinery and churning waters ceases; the ship is to try the passage through the Corinthian Canal, where foreign steamers rarely enter because of the narrowness and strength of the current. Steamer class restrictions are forgotten as passengers rush forward, taking note of the grandeur of the scene and the entire gigantic modern work, accomplished on this ancient and historic isthmus. Perpendicular stone walls rise about the steamer to a height of about 125 feet.

In ancient times ships were sometimes dragged across the isthmus, dividing the Saronic from the Corinthian Gulf. This difficult task was performed at "Dioleus," a Greek word, meaning to pull or cut through. In 1826, Nero began cutting a canal here. He gave up the project, which was continued 18 centuries later by a French company in 1881, who sought to open a ship canal. In 1889 they ceased work, and Greeks completed it in 1893. The present waterway is about 70 feet broad, 26 feet deep and nearly four miles long.

Corinth Is No More
The refugee ship barely touches the protecting walls on the canal's either side, as it is towed on. These continuous inner barricades are some six feet high, put up to avoid falling rock and clay. In old days a wall, parallel to the canal, fortified the isthmus, and traces of it are found even now. To the south, half a mile from the sea are remains of the fortress of the Poseidon precinct. In its stadium, the famous Isthmian games were celebrated, and many a little youth was crowned with a wreath of leaves. Traces of the Temple of Poseidon and other buildings are existent. Gliding through the waterway on the refugee steamer one's thoughts go far back. To the time, for example, when artistic Corinth was sacked by Rome, 146 years before Christ. To the time when Julius Caesar built it up again, this time as a Roman colony, with Roman Governor in residence. It was a fortress on one of the greatest trade routes between Rome and the unknown East. Before that it was the commercial capital of Greece—called the "Star of Greece," known for its riches and luxury. It had 300,000 citizens, now it has 5000. The Greek refugees, who have lost nearly everything gaze silently.

The Apostle Paul came here, too, 14 years before the first canal was attempted. After he had stayed a year and a half, sowing seeds of Truth and seeing that the refugees, came an Alexandrian Jew, teaching Christianity. "I have planted," says Paul, "Apollos watered." (I Cor. III, 6.) The steamer's masts pass 20 feet beneath the iron bridge of the Athens & Corinth Railway. An hour and a quarter from starting the sea, in water entered. A fishing boat tosses and bounces close at hand. The ship has shortened its route from Athens to the Adriatic by 202 miles. It is dusk now, and the lights of New Corinth are visible.

WORLD COURT JUDGES VOTE NOT TO ADVISE
By Special Cable
THE HAGUE, July 24.—Yesterday the World Court declared itself incompetent to give advice on the question of the autonomy of East Karelia between Finland and Soviet Russia, as the latter was not willing to co-operate before the Court.

The vice-president, C. A. Weiss of France, and Judge Nyholm of Denmark, Judge de Bustamante of Cuba, and Judge Altamira of Spain, dissented from the majority's decision.

LISTLESS TRADE MARKS PRIMARY CLOTH CENTERS

No Buyers' Strike but Distributors' Fear of One Holds Back Business

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 24 (Special).—Primary cotton goods markets have continued listless during the last week despite the fact that retail trade is fully as good if not better than this time last year.

There is no buyers' strike so far as the retail public is concerned, but the producers of cotton goods find that the fear of the distributors that a buyers' strike may develop against prices based on 25 cent raw cotton has brought about the same condition as to trading as if there actually were a buyers' strike.

Wages in industrial centers are still not far below the war peak and despite the heavy curtailment of production which is going on in textile producing plants, there is not much unemployment for those who really want to find work. In other words, the purchasing power in the industrial sections of the east and middle west is not greatly reduced from what it formerly was.

In the farming sections, however, there is a different story. Crops are good, but prices for farm products have declined badly since late spring and prospects for autumn buying by the rural population do not look as good now as they did a few months ago when jobbers received from such sections the early bookings of fall goods.

Few Cancellations

Deliveries are now going out on such forward contracts, there having been but very little cancellation as yet. Jobbers are apprehensive that a heavier part of this early business may be revoked before the middle of August, but if it is not it will probably mean an early resumption of buying in the gray goods markets.

The extent to which prices have declined can be readily seen from the fact that 35½¢ in 1922 are being delivered by some mills on old contracts placed at levels above 11 cents, although this week the same goods are offered from certain quarters in the gray goods markets at 8½ cents.

The attempt of the manufacturers to force business during a normally dull season of the year, in the hope of keeping their plants running steadily has undermined all confidence in values without producing the business required.

The rapidly improving crop prospects in the cotton-growing districts have punctured the cotton famine bubble, and declining prices for the raw material have not helped any in stabilizing cotton goods prices.

Cotton manufacturers have accepted the inevitable and are now closing their plants until business develops, very few of them caring to take any chances on making up unsold goods on what may prove a high raw material market.

Mill men and many distributors too expect a resumption of activity by Sept. 15, possibly a month sooner, but meanwhile the trade is marking time with the depleted stocks already in hand and hoping that sufficient goods will be available when they are needed.

Prints in Doldrums

Print cloth markets were in the doldrums all last week, with buying confined to small lots of quick goods at very close prices. There was not much change from the previous week so far as quotations went, and from the present outlook there seems little likelihood that values will go much lower.

Most of the eastern print cloth mills seem to have set 55 cents a pound as the minimum below which they will not go, and as a result there was very little business of any kind done during the last week in eastern-made goods. Fall River (Mass.) sales for the week were estimated at not much more than 20,000 pieces, or hardly a half-day's run, while the mills in that center were turning out only about a quarter of their normal product.

Mills in Rhode Island and in northern New England are also going on short time or closing altogether for a period.

Fine Goods and Yarns

The fine goods mills, although not so much affected, are getting very little business on the standard plain constructions made from combed yarns and are consequently shutting down their plain looms as fast as orders expire.

There is a good demand for fancy and novelties, and for that reason the fine goods mills are not likely to shut down or to go on short-time schedules, but the volume of output, of course, is affected by the stoppage of so many plain looms.

Yarn mills are still struggling to keep any equipment at all in operation. Each week brings the report of this or that spinning mill closing for an indefinite period, and yarn prices are gradually slipping to lower and lower levels.

It has been estimated that the current output of combed yarn mills is hardly 25 per cent of normal, and the immediate outlook is not so very promising for a quick resumption of normal production.

IRREGULAR TREND IN DULL MARKET

Opening prices in today's New York

Great Northern preferred dipped 2 points, to 61½, a new low for the year. Associated Oil sold 2 points lower, and numerous stocks fell off a point or more.

The feature of the foreign exchange market opening was a drop of German marks to a new low at .0002½ cents.

Steels Under Pressure

Prices strengthened some in the second hour, but advances generally left stocks fractionally lower than closing quotations yesterday. Much of the selling was traceable to circulation of a pessimistic interview on European conditions by a prominent banker just back from abroad.

Steel shares continued under pressure, Gulf States declining 1½.

Call money opened at 4 1/4 per cent. Persistent selling of the steels, equipments, rails, and oils resulted in a spread of the downward movement to other parts of the list in the early afternoon. Central Leather preferred dropped 3/4 and the common 1/2, despite a favorable earning statement for the first six months of the year. Other large losses included Du Pont 4 1/4, Baldwin 2 3/4, May department stores 2, and Bethlehem and Gulf States steels 1 1/2 each. Middle west and western railroads were pushed down 1 to 1 1/2 points, and Studebaker

Bond Prices Irregular

Price movements in the early dealings in bonds today were irregular and within a narrow trading area. Foreign bonds, particularly the European issues, were in moderate demand and were in good demand at moderate increases. Active United States Government bonds were slightly reactionary. Net changes among the railroad mortgages were small, with numerous low-priced issues pointing downward. Minneapolis & St. Louis refunding $5,000,000 4 1/2% 1930s advanced 1/4 point. Pierce Oil 8s advanced 1/2 point. American issues were influenced by the election of a new board of directors by the preferred stockholders. Other changes in the industrial group were unimportant.

Special from Monitor Bureau

WASHINGTON, July 24—"There is plenty of credit available for the farmers at a fair rate of interest to enable them to market their crops orderly," declared Merton L. Corey, member of the Federal Farm Loan Board in charge of the newly organized intermediate credit banks.

He expressed the view that market conditions are so great would require the farmers to hold their wheat until there is a recovery in prices. Mr. Corey had just returned from a conference at St. Paul, Minn., when seen by the representative of The Christian Science Monitor. He said:

"The farmers at St. Paul told me they would need about $5,000,000 and they are now negotiating for a loan of something like that amount. They are waiting for a few days to see the course of the market."

"The attitude of the Federal Farm Loan Board in carrying out the law," said Mr. Corey, "is that the farmers should have all the credit they need to market their crops in an orderly manner, but the law does not contemplate that we should encourage price-fixing by the farmers of their

"If the farmers find that there is too much wheat in the world to grow at a profit, they will not plant so much next year. It is not our function to try and regulate the production or prices of wheat, but simply to provide ample financial facilities for the farmers to do what they care to do. Our loans are made at the rate of 5 1/2 per cent and they run for not more than six months."

"I do not contemplate that the Intermediate Credit Banks will lend more than $50,000,000 this year, but if necessary we can raise many times that amount through the sale of debentures to the public. The 12 intermediate credit banks are capitalized $60,000,000 and we can issue debentures up to 10 times that amount, or $600,000,000. Besides we have available some $37,000,000 in the treasury after deducting the $3,000,000 already advanced."

The Pacific Mills' financial statement for the six months ending June but for the six months ending June 30, showing net sales of $25,045,282 and a profit of $2,759,485, the latter valued at $1.00 a share on the 10,000,000 common stock, is one of the best ever turned in by the big textile concern. The full year's dividend at the present 3 1/2 rate was thus more than earned in the first six months. Sales for the half-year were at the rate of more than $50,000,000 a year. The figure exceeded but twice in the history of the company, namely, in 1920 and 1918, when prices for goods were at a higher level than at present.

CENTRAL LEATHER'S QUARTER

The Central Leather Company reports for the quarter ended June 30, 1938, a deficit, after charges and federal taxes, of $79,637, compared with a deficit of $399,022 in the similar period of 1937.

NEW YORK July 24—Negotiations for a loan of $25,000,000 to the Mexican Government to be used in establishing a federal reserve system patterned on that of the United States, are now reported under way among American, French and Spanish bankers. The Mexican Government, it is said, wishes to reorganize its financial system and to circulate about 100,000,000 pesos notes.

Augustino Legoretta, head of the National Bank of Mexico, and connected with the operations of the Mexican Government, arrived here on Sunday from France, where he secured approval of the plan from several foreign bankers, according to the report. The scheme, in general, involves the lending of the money by Wall Street to the European interests, who will in turn lend it to the Mexican Government. Legoretta's good part of his time yesterday conferring with representatives of J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and other large banking firms. It is understood that today will be spent similarly, and that he hopes to return to his own country with assurance of a "greenback" agreement not later than Thursday.

The new loan, it appears, will be incorporated as a part of the Mexican debt agreement. Recognition of Mexico by the United States Government is thought to be involved, and it is believed that any reorganization of the Mexican financial system will have a favorable effect on opinion in Washington.

BETTERMENT IN FOOTWEAR TRADE IS STILL HOLDING

Nearly Normal Output Prevails
Among Chief Manufacturing
Centers of United States

General conditions in the chief shoe manufacturing points throughout the United States are not far from a normal output, the most conspicuous improvement, however, being noted in Haverhill and Lynn in the Massachusetts, and other eastern sections reported for lines of ladies' modish footwear from medium to high grades.

A wide range of reports concerning the call for men's shoes show a steady gain and includes all grades from the work shoe to the semi-dress. Quotations remain unchanged. Nevertheless, there is enough strength behind them to cause manufacturers to decline offers below established rates. As a matter of fact, certain lines of ladies' footwear advanced last week from 10¢ to 15¢ a pair, and the medium to top selections. Conditions thus featured may jar certain buyers, but the long curtailment of leather production, together with the fact that loss and not profit has been the tanners' share for nearly two years, have come to a turn which, although plainly seen in the work shoe, has manifested in duplicate orders not general but reflected by a firmness in prices quite significant of an upward movement of values.

Strikes in Brockton, Mass., and adjacent cities have turned toward other manufacturing centers, but damage incident to such affairs cannot be wholly eliminated even though manufacturers are willing to help buyers out of such vexatious predicaments.

To sum up the situation the future looks active and strong, with ladies' novelties holding a firm place with consumers who seem willing to pay well for up-to-date styles.

Leather Quite Active
Union sole leather tanners report that buyers are showing a lively interest, but the strength of the market stands trading. A few large contractors bought while values were a bit flexible, but now that bids have declined, sales have settled back into more necessary purchases.

Heavy steer backs are offered at 52¢; medium weights 50¢, with cow backs quoted from 50¢ to 47¢. Light cows are 46¢ to 43¢.

Union calf continues quiet. There is a fair accumulation in the Boston market, but dealers are holding prices strong. Choice heavy shoulders are firm at 34¢ to 30¢, with lighter weights quoted at 30¢ and 29¢. Bellies are 22¢ to 21¢, heads 14¢ to 12¢.

Oak sole leather is again moving in fair-size lots. Buyers' bids are no longer tempting, therefore, traders are holding closely to the new market. A tannery run of oak steer backs is now listed at 54¢ to 50¢; cow backs 48¢ to 42¢. A small movement of flinders beds is reported at 85¢ to 65¢.

Oak calf is dull, nevertheless, tanners insist on rates for whites which are strong. Finished shoulders are 35¢ to 30¢; selected bellies 27¢ to 25¢; cow heads 14¢ to 13¢; cow heads 13¢ to 12¢. Calfskins, men's weights, although showing no marked activity, are selling at full quotations. Tanners feel that unless all signs fall, there will be quite a demand for colored chrome calf inside of 30 days, therefore they have stopped giving concessions.

As yet prices are unchanged on the standard grades of calf, but there is a strong tone to the market. The calf for novelty shades is still good and the volume of shoe orders booked calling for modish leather is sufficient to keep prices steady. Not for many months have calfskin tanners seen such a bright outlook.

Upper Leather Conditions
Side upper leather tanners are booking orders for standard grades daily. All markets report a slow, but uniform improvement in the demand.

Although the tone of the market is strong prices range about the same as listed last week except a fractional advance is asked for choice colored chrome, men's weights. Quotations on such stock are 32¢ to 28¢ medium, and lower grades range in price from 26¢ to 20¢, and 18¢ to 15¢, respectively. The demand for retanned leather is fairly good. The liberal orders for work shoes, with duplicates, following the return home of buyers, gives to the market a promising outlook. Top grades are offered at 26¢ to 23¢; mediums from 20¢ to 17¢; cheaper grades at 15¢ to 10¢. There is also a revival in the call for elk leather. Top grades bring from 33¢ to 40¢; a prime middle grade 24¢ to 30¢, with lower grades offered at 17¢ to 20¢.

Lightweight colored buck is selling well. Choice selections are 50¢ to 42¢; No. 2 grades 37¢ to 35¢; a fair quality of No. 3 at 30¢ to 25¢.

The future for all side leathers looks very bright.

MILLION MARKS FOR TWO AND A QUARTER

NEW YORK, July 24—German marks continued their course downward in the New York foreign exchange market today, establishing a new low record at .00024, or 1,000,000 marks for $2.25.

NARROW CHANGES TAKE PLACE ON LONDON BOARD

LONDON, July 24—Home rails on the stock exchange here today were in demand on the hopes of increased dividends. Argentine rails were higher on continued short-covering. Gilt-edged issues reacted after early strength. Dollar securities were unchanged.

Oils were heavy. Royal Dutch was 29½, Mexican Eagle 31-32, and Shell Transport 37-38. Rubber issues were strong in spots. French loans were firm on better Paris markets.

Kaffirs were steady. Industrials on the whole were firm, with traders showing more confidence. Rio Tinto was 35½; Hudson's Bay 5½.

The market in the main was steady, but changes were narrow due to the general carryover.

LOWEST GASOLINE PRICE SINCE 1915

One Cent a Gallon Cut Brings Retail Quotation Down to
23 Cents

The 1 cent a gallon cut in gasoline announced Monday by distributors in the New England territory, bringing tank wagon prices down to 20½ cents and retail quotations down to 23 cents, established the lowest price for motor fuel that has prevailed since 1915.

Since the last advance (1½ cents to 24½ cents in February), there have been four cuts of 1 cent each, with further reductions a possibility. Despite the maximum movement of motor vehicles during the past few months, demand for gasoline has been insufficient to prevent the accumulation of large stores of "gas" at Atlantic seaboard refineries.

Nov records continue to be made in the production of crude oil, output for the week ended July 14, registering 2,338,750 barrels, an increase of 39,600 barrels over the preceding week. The output of crude from California, the Santa Fe Springs, Long Beach and Huntington Beach oil pools in California boosted California's contribution for that week to an average of 863,000 barrels daily, an increase of 33,000 barrels over the previous week.

Despite 30 per cent cuts in oil runs by the big producers of southern California, and with talk of 45 per cent cuts until the peak of production is passed, the flow of oil is exceeding existing storage capacity.

For low gasoline prices of other years comparable with the present quotations, one must go back to 1915, when the tank wagon price ranged from 13 to 11 cents. From that date the price trend was in the main upward, reaching a peak of 32 cents in September, 1920. The retail price at that time was 2 cents higher or 34 cents. Since the 1½-cent markup of Feb. 26 last, a 2½-cent differential has existed between tank wagon and retail price.

ORDERS FROM JAPAN

NEW YORK, July 24—The Westinghouse Electric International concern has received orders from Japan for power and electric equipment aggregating more than $1,000,000.

BIG ELECTRIC PLANT HAVING AN ACTIVE TIME

Usual Midsummer Dullness Relieved by Business Being Done by Western Electric Co.

CHICAGO, July 24 (Special)—The telephone business furnishes an outstanding example of sustained business activity at this time when the usual midsummer dullness is accentuated by evidences of curtailment from other causes in some industrial fields.

The Western Electric Company, which is the chief manufacturing subsidiary of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, is doing the largest business in its history. This concern has become the largest single industrial unit in Chicago.

The forces employed at the Hawthorne works have been increased by about 2000 persons in the last few weeks and now number about 35,000. Even with this many workers and with facilities which have been increasing constantly for many years, the company is not able to meet the demands made upon it.

The financial statements of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company present figures that tax the imagination, but its activities are so widely distributed that it is hard to visualize their magnitude. A better idea of the enormous scope of the system can be obtained from observation of the great producing machine that keeps the Bell organization supplied with apparatus.

Plant a Small City
The Western Electric plant, on the western outskirts of this city, is the center of a thriving community which if segregated would make a city of 100,000 or more inhabitants. It is steadily growing and even now there are improvements and extensions under construction which will call for an expenditure of about $5,000,000.

These include additions to the manufacturing facilities and enlarged terminals to take care of the great quantities of incoming and outgoing freight which the establishment keeps moving. Early in the year working schedules were outlined, but every few weeks it is found that these programs of production are inadequate and have to be revised upward, sometimes doubled.

The installation of the automatic telephone system, which is now in progress in Chicago and in some of the other large cities of the country, has added a great deal to the demands upon the Western Electric facilities.

Then there is the steady growth of the telephone lines which make a network over the country, touching every hamlet and extending to the farmhouses, the needs of which in maintenance and expansion call for a large amount of materials.

In addition there are large orders for export to be filled. The Western Electric Company is another large interest that draws its apparatus and supplies from the same source. Vast as is the output of the Western Electric Company, it is far short of requirements, and a deficiency is made up by substituting work, these contracts making up a considerable part of the business of some of the smaller electrical manufacturing concerns in this field.

Elevated Consolidation
Financial rehabilitation of the Chicago Elevated railways is in prospect as a result of a recapitalization plan which has just been passed by the committee representing the $14,000,000 outstanding notes of the companies, which have been in default for several years. The plan provides for consolidation into one company of the Northwestern, South Side, Metropolitan, and Oak Park lines.

The outstanding mortgage bonds and equipment trusts of the operating companies will remain undisturbed and a new first lien and refunding mortgage will be executed by the consolidated company.

An issue of $18,563,000 adjustment debentures also will be created, together with a new issue of $20,225,000 common stock. The old common and preferred stocks will be wiped out and there will be a scaling down of $34,000,000 in the total outstanding capital and obligations of the system.

On the basis of present earnings, which for the Chicago Elevated May 31, last, showed a balance of $579,956, after charges and depreciation, the consolidated company will be able to meet interest charges under the new plan and have a modest working capital besides.

CANADA'S TRADE THIRD LARGER THAN JUNE, 1922

Western Crop News All of Encouraging Tone, With Gain in Yield Indicated

OTTAWA, July 24 (Special)—Canada's trade returns for June, which show an increase in exports and imports combined of 33 per cent over those for the similar month last year, may be considered a pretty good indication of the business situation. The gain in domestic exports was most marked, having been equal to about 30 per cent; imports gained to almost the same extent.

The total external trade for the month was valued at $170,720,000, as compared with $134,775,000 for the corresponding month last year. The imports were valued at $54,632,000, an increase of $23,000,000; while total exports stood at $95,087,000, an increase of about $22,000,000. Food products again took the lead with a total of $38,370,000, exclusive of animals, which amount to $2,600,000.

Grain Movement Heavy
There was a much heavier outward movement of grain during the month than there was during the similar month last year, as compared with 11,760,000 bushels. Exports to the United States at 1,222,000 bushels were 270,000 less than during June, 1922.

Those to Britain at 13,104,000 bushels were 6,113,000 greater than for the similar month a year ago, while in the case of shipments to all other countries they were 7,901,000 bushels, as compared with 3,270,000. Exports of wheat flour were 400,000 barrels, as compared with 316,000 for June, 1922.

Exports of lumber, pulp, and paper were again high, being $25,145,000, or more than $5,000,000 above those for the corresponding month last year. Shipments of newsprint out of the country totaled 1,857,000 hundred-weights, or 128,000 more than for June last year, while the value was $7,000,000, as compared with $6,136,000. As imports of iron and its products, valued at over $2,000,000, were greater during the similar month last year, it is quite evident that the United States is selling Canada a great deal more than it did a year ago.

The buoyancy of the export trade, even during that which is usually considered an off-season in Canada, is very satisfactory, and due to the fact that the range of exports is much wider than it used to be even a few years ago. For this lumber and paper products are very largely responsible, but not wholly so, the demand for certain other lines of manufactured commodities being especially good.

Crop Outlook Good

Crop reports from the west contain nothing but good news. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics has endeavored to correct the impression that it had estimated the wheat crop at 500,000,000 bushels. That any such report as this should get abroad occasions surprise, for while some prominent in the grain trade have expressed the view that such a yield was probable, still those at all acquainted with the situation know full well that the bureau of statistics has no information on which such an estimate could have been made. It does think 366,000,000 bushels possible, and as this is about 70,000,000 bushels in excess of its estimate at this time for last year's crop, it is quite evident that indications are for an even larger yield than a year ago.

PITTSBURGH & LAKE ERIE'S YEAR

The Pittsburgh & Lake Erie road for the year ended Dec. 31, 1922, reports net profits of $4,332,010, after taxes and charges, equivalent to $6.01 a share ($50 par) on $35,985,600 stock, compared with $2,334,961, or $3.31 a share in 1921. Figures compare:

1922	1921
Operating revenue	$29,570,582	$28,226,059
Operating expenses	25,080,013	20,340,436
Taxes, etc.	1,098,104	1,202,688
Operating income	3,392,465	1,682,935

LOW SCORES IN WESTERN GOLF

Fall of National Figures in the Scottish Game Is Expected Today at Cleveland

CLEVELAND, O., July 24 (Special).—The second day's play in the qualifying rounds of the western amateur golf championship was under way at the Mayfield Country Club here today, with prospects of the brilliant golf of Monday being repeated unless rain, which seemed probable Monday night, serves as a handicap.

Today's play is expected to see the fall of national figures in the Scottish game, and among those who will be trying to keep in the list of those to start match play Wednesday morning will be John Anderson, the talented linkman of the Winged-Foot Golf Club of Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Anderson, former Metropolitan champion of New York, and at least once a finalist in the United States amateur tournament, found at the end of Monday's 18 holes that he had shot a 79, a score that must be greatly improved upon Tuesday to keep him in the running.

Anderson and Otis found themselves in a vortex of super golf in the first day's play, J. W. Sweetser, national amateur titleholder, broke the Mayfield course record with a 68, a score equal to one that he made the day previous in an exhibition round.

Sweetser's play was the feature of the opening day, the Yale star playing incomparable golf over a course for which the par is 71. He recorded four birdies and an eagle in the 18 holes, and amazed a large gallery, who followed him around, by his masterful use of the malleable niblic, the club that stood him such good stead at Brookline, Mass., last year when he won the national title.

Golf's newest wonder man came perilously near scoring another eagle on the homeward nine, missing a 40-foot putt by three inches on the 44-yard tenth hole. An eagle there would have given him a 67.

The height of the pace set by Sweetser and Capt. E. F. Carter of Flossmore, Ill., who shot a 71, can only be realized when it is noted that Eddie Held, last year's national public links champion, playing a 73, only one over par, is five strokes behind in the scramble for the low medal score.

Forty-five players broke 80 today, who represent the Algonquin Club of St. Louis, was tied by Joseph Wells of East Liverpool, O., who went out with a brilliant 33, and then slowed to 40 on the way back.

Today's play indicates that those who shoot higher than 155 will not get into the match play. Those who are most likely to qualify and their scores of yesterday are:

CRAWFORD NOTCH, N. H., July 23.—Preliminary matches started here today the elimination among the 40 players entered in the White Mountains and New Hampshire state tennis championship tournament. L. B. Rice of Boston, Mass., A. W. Jones of Yale and Providence, R. I., and W. W. Ingraham of Haverhill, Mass., and R. I., draw byes today. F. J. Sulloway, last year's winner, will not defend his title.

Added this year to the usual program are women's singles and mixed doubles tournaments.

Among the preliminary round matches were the following: Arthur Ingraham Sr., Oakland, R. I., defeated H. G. Buckminster, Breton Woods, 6-2, 6-0; Arthur Ingraham Jr., Oakland, R. I., defeated H. L. Dudley Jr., New York, 6-4, 6-4; A. C. Ingraham, Oakland, R. I., defeated Anton Hoboken, N. J., 6-3, 6-3; F. C. Hart, Montreal, defeated J. B. Keyes Jr., Quincy, Mass., 4-6, 12-10, 6-1; W. I. Badger, Boston, Mass., defeated G. A. Walker Jr., Bronxville, N. Y., 6-2, 6-3.

"If Costello wants to row against me for the title let him come to Duluth," the Duluth boat club star said. "I shall not go to him at the national regatta."

Costello refused to row against Hoover here this spring, stating that "the water of Lake Superior is too rough."

HOOVER WILL NOT GO TO BALTIMORE

DULUTH, Minn., July 24.—W. M. Hoover, world's champion sculler, home after losing the diamond sculls on the Thames, declared last night that he will not go to the national regatta at Baltimore to row against Paul Costello.

"If Costello wants to row against me for the title let him come to Duluth," the Duluth boat club star said. "I shall not go to him at the national regatta."

Costello refused to row against Hoover here this spring, stating that "the water of Lake Superior is too rough."

U.S. Women Start Preparation for Invasion of British Net Stars

Mrs. Mallory, Miss Helen Wills and Miss MacDonald Advance in New York Tennis

RYE, N. Y., July 24 (Special).—The women tennis players of the United States started their preparations for the international team match against the representatives of Great Britain, when several of the leading players played in the annual New York State championship, on the new turf courts of the Westchester-Biltmore Country Club, here yesterday morning.

Mrs. F. I. Mallory, the national champion; Miss Helen Wills, national girl champion, and Miss Mayme MacDonald, the newly crowned national girl court champion, each played two matches, and won both in straight sets, though Mrs. Mallory did not seem to be playing as well as in her competitions last year. Miss Wills is a round behind the others, as she started in the first round, while both the others had byes.

Others of the 12 survivors of the day's play were Miss Edna Raymond, whose return to the courts has been a feature of the season; Mrs. Clifford Lockhorn, until recently Miss Helen Gilleaudeau, and Miss Edith Sigourney of Boston.

Miss MacDonald, the former Seattle champion, who has been studying in New York this winter, made a most impressive showing in each of her matches, defeating in turn Miss J. C. Gott, losing only one game, and then Mrs. Stokes Weaver, 6-2, 6-1, using her remarkable backhand and courtship ability with success in both.

Miss Wills was also at her best in her matches, losing only one game in her two matches, when she dropped one on her own service to a local player, Miss Margaret Childress, in the second round.

She appears to possess a stronger stroke, which she uses occasionally, though her distinctive chop is also still frequently in evidence. She is at the top of the second half, and cannot encounter Mrs. Mallory before the final.

Miss Sigourney proved too strong for Mrs. E. C. Hausel, who has been especially noted this season for her victories over well-known players, in spite of an unusual lack of the usual stately play. The Bostonian depended on her hard shots to the back corners of the courts to prevent the New York girl from getting into position for her backhand, and took the match in straight sets.

Mrs. Mallory dropped three games at the start of her match against Mrs. Bronson Batchelor, but ran out the match without further loss, then reversed the process against Miss Mary Case, taking the first set, 6-0, and then losing three games in the second. Her steadiness in returning the ball from the back-court seemed to be far from perfect, but this may be accounted for by lack of recent practice. She will encounter Mrs. Robert Le Roy today, and this may give her the needed hard opposition to bring her play to its higher level.

The summary:

HATHERLY OPEN SET FOR AUG. 3-4

Quimet, Mosser and Guilford Expected to Take Part

The announcement by the golf committee of the Hatherly Country Club that Aug. 3 and 4 have been the dates selected for their annual open tournament is of real interest to Massachusetts golfers, wherever dispersed.

For several years past the "Hatherly Open" has been the open tournament attraction of the season. From all over the State the golfing fraternity assembles at Hatherly, and the surrounding area of the South Shore country clubs, and in such numbers that in each of the years 1921 and 1922 the figures 305 and 315 have stood as record entry lists for Massachusetts open tournaments.

From a playing standpoint, the Hatherly Club now affords the golfer a real test. The addition of the new nine holes two years ago changed Hatherly from a fairly easy course to one which engages the skill of the ablest devotees of the ancient and royal game.

During the past year the club, according to Treasurer G. M. Barnum, has spent considerable money in improvements. Cross and lateral drainage on the first, third, sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth holes have put them in excellent shape. Number seven, where heavy rain has caused a surrounding ground soft for many days, is now in perfect condition, a deep drain in the form of a sand ditch on the right side having been put in at a cost of $2500.

The fourteenth, which always was a difficult hole to golfers, has been made more level and the green well trapped. On this particular hole, it is now almost impossible for a fairly driven ball to go out of bounds.

So carefully has the work on the links been done, that the fairways are now as attractive as the greens. With combined sea and country views, the Hatherly course is singularly beautiful.

For this coming tournament the Hatherly officials and their ladies are planning to eclipse their former successes. F. D. Oumet, of the Woodland Golf Club, former national open and amateur champion, former Massachusetts state champion, and winner of the St. George's Cup during the recent invasion of England by American golfers; Karl Mosser of the Braeburn Country Club, present Massachusetts state amateur champion; J. Guilford, the Woodland "Siege Gun," former national amateur and open state champion, and other leading golfers are expected to attend. It is not unlikely that a match between some of these will be arranged for the afternoon of Aug. 4.

The well-known hospitality extended by the Hatherly Club is a byword in golfing circles. A lunch will be provided on both Friday and Saturday, with a dance at the casino on Saturday evening.

George Hawley, the genial president of the club, is rounding out his third year in that position, which he is continuing to fill ably. The 1923 Hatherly golf committee is Lindsey Hooper, chairman; Roger Manning, W. R. Washburn, N. W. Cobb and F. E. Rice.

NEW CONGRESS RULING on "Pro" Situation

No Reinstatement for Those Overstepping Amateur Status

PARIS, July 24 (AP).—Once a professional, always a professional, was the ruling made last night at the congress of the International Athletic Federation. The decision was taken on motion of the American representative, Joseph McCabe, who was supported by H. J. Barclay, Great Britain, and Szilard Stankovitz, Hungary. The ruling was that henceforth a person who knowingly becomes a professional cannot again be qualified as an amateur.

In taking this step the congress was inspired by the fact that hitherto the rules have been so interpreted as to permit affiliated associations to requalify certain professionals as amateurs.

On the subject of cords the congress decided to maintain existing rules, with the following exceptions: First, that there shall be neither cords nor pegs in relay races, and, second, that the 200-meters flat race shall be entirely run between cords and pegs.

It was also resolved, in order to make the text of Article 21 of the rules perfectly clear, that in a race over a given distance if competitors desire to try for records for a lesser distance they may be permitted to do so on condition that the attempt be made in accordance with the last paragraph of Article 21 and that in addition times are kept by special timekeepers and judges. No attempt may be made to create a record for a longer distance than that of the race specified.

JONES OFFICIALLY FETED BY GEORGIA

ATLANTA, Ga., July 24.—The praise of Georgia greeted R. T. Jones Jr. last night when he was officially feted in a manner that befits only kings, queens and golf champions. At the end of it there was a silver service, presented by the Atlanta Athletic Club, glistering alongside the trophy that he brought home from the national open golf tournament.

Five hundred persons, including financiers, state and city officials, graced the banquet table that was set for the formal welcome of the titleholder. The great game of Scotland was taken up by the speakers where Jones' stick began to wield manliness in 1916, and taken through the play of his teens to the eighteenth hole at Inwood.

Mayor W. A. Sims formally acknowledged Jones' worth to the city, and the words of praise were added to by A. O. Candler Sr., capitalist, and others.

BRITISH FENCERS
CAPTURE TROPHYU. S. Loses in Sabre Match.
Final Score 24 to 22

LONDON, July 24.—The British fencing team last night won the Robert M. Thompson trophy from the United States team which came across to defend it. The final score was Great Britain, 24; United States, 22.

The Britons gained possession of the trophy when they won the sabre match, the third match of the competition, by a score of 10 points to 6. Last week the Americans defeated the Englishmen in the foil, 11 to 5, and in the epee contest the Englishmen won nine out of the 14 bouts.

Last night A. S. Lyon, New York Fencers' Club, with a fast attack and fine footwork, won all four of his bouts, but none of the other Americans could do even so well as to break even. The American team was made up of Lyon, Sergeant J. W. Dimond, United States Navy; L. M. Schoonmaker, New York Fencers' Club, and C. R. McPherson, New York Athletic Club. The British team comprised W. Hammond, Lieut. C. A. Kershaw, A. H. Corbie and E. Seligman.

Diamond defeated Seligman, but lost to his other three opponents; McPherson won from Corbie, but also lost to his other three adversaries, while Schoonmaker lost all four of his matches.

MISS JAMES LOSES
SWIMMING TITLEMiss Jeans Defeats Noted English Girl at London

NEW YORK, July 24.—Miss Hilda James, the noted English champion swimmer, who made a trip to the United States last summer, has lost her national English 220-yard title to Miss Constance Jeans, the United States 100-yard titleholder. Miss James was beaten by a yard in the final heat for the title at the Lime Grove Baths, Shepherd's Bush, London, recently, in the record-breaking championship time of 2m. 54s.

In her heat in the preliminary Miss Jeans broke the previous record of 2m. 23s. Miss James, who represented the Cunard S. C., having severed her connection with the Garston S. C., had an easy task in taking her preliminary heat. The final heat between Miss Jeans, who formerly held the title, and the champion proved to be a battle royal. Miss Jeans forced the pace throughout, Miss James, however, being in close attendance. At the last turn, 30 yards from the finish, the former champion had a yard lead, which she maintained to the finish. Miss Jeans' time of 2m. 54s. still further reduced the record which she had made in winning her preliminary heat. There were 13 competitors in the various heats.

PICK-UPS

GREATER NEW YORK has entered upon the longest baseball season ever recorded in a modern season. Starting yesterday and continuing until Saturday, the Giants, Yankees and Brooklyn Superbas will be conducting their games on foreign lots or not play at all, giving Manhattan and Flatbush fans no choice save reading the bulletin boards and speculating on the chances of their favorites in the remainder of the race. It seems almost unbelievable that schedule farmers could ignore the best-paying proposition in baseball for so long a stretch, but they play no favorites when it comes to dealing out such peculiarities.

By striking out five batters in Sunday's game with Cleveland, Walter Perry Johnson, Washington's premier pitcher and dean of American League boxmen, passed the 3000 mark in strikeouts. A major league record was established by Johnson several years ago when he passed the 2997 strikeouts mark made by Christopher Mathewson during his 17 years with the New York Giants and Cincinnati Reds in the National League. Also the beginning of the present campaign, the beginning of the majors, Johnson had hung up a record of 2932 strikeouts. In the 25 games in which he has participated this season, the big right-hander has retired 70 batters by that route.

It looks like a great race in the second half of the Boston Twilight League race. St. Andrews, winner of the first half, will play a series at the end of the season with the new winner, provided, of course, that the same team does not repeat. Many followers think that North Cambridge, last year's champion, has the best chance to stand off the Dorchester aggregation.

Twelve to three sounds like a pretty one-sided score, and in fact it is, but it took the Chicago Nationals 12 innings yesterday to hang such a count up on their Pittsburgh opponents. All of which gives an inkling of what the "peerless leaver" might do with a team of near-first grade performers.

RICHARDS DECIDES TO DEFEND TITLE

Four Players Reach Fifth Round in Metropolitan Tennis Tournament at Crescent A. C.

Special from Monitor Bureau
NEW YORK, July 24.—With the advent of Vincent Richards, who decided, after considerable doubt, to defend his title, as well as the first appearance of Harvey Snodgrass and H. G. M. Keller, the third annual metropolitan grass tennis championship got into full swing yesterday on the Crescent Athletic Club courts, and at the close of the day the first and second rounds had been completed and four players had reached the fifth round.

Richards played two matches, winning three sets without the loss of a game, and then easing off in the fourth, contenting himself with a score of 6-3, and indulging in considerable practice of new strokes, which apparently are the result of his observation on his Wimbledon trip. He showed considerable improvement in his ground strokes, while his famous volleys were less in evidence than usual.

But the most remarkable record was made by Harvey Snodgrass, who reached the fifth round as the result of a bye and three victories in straight sets. Only in the final set did the Los Angeles player ease off, thus maintaining the brilliant record he has shown ever since his first appearance in tournament play last year in pressed the onlookers as an indication of future promise along the lines of Johnston rather than like his other prototype, Maurice McLaughlin. His backhand drew special attention, being a true stroke, rather than the usual California chop.

B. I. C. Norton again advanced, his activity being even more in evidence than before, while he made little attempt at heavy stroking, his antagonist affording little testing practice.

Chateau for American Athletes at Olympics

Prince Murat's Mansion Will Accommodate About 200 Men

PARIS, July 23 (AP).—The American athletes participating in the 1924 Olympics will be housed during their stay here in a beautiful chateau belonging to Prince Murat on a hill overlooking the Seine near Vincennes, nine miles from the Colombes Stadium, in which the games will be held.

Arrangements to take over the chateau were concluded yesterday, the lease being signed by Princess Murat and Col. B. M. Thompson, the latter representing the American Olympic Committee.

The chateau will provide accommodations for from 200 to 220 athletes. There is also stable space for the 20 or more horses and polo ponies which will be brought over from America. It is the intention of the committee to erect large building, similar to an army barracks, for a motion-picture and amusement house, and a large tent to be used as the dining room.

The camp kitchen will have regular army equipment and the athletes will be served a real American breakfast before leaving for the stadium, and a light dinner in the evening. The noon meal will be taken at the stadium. Buses will run between the chateau and the stadium every quarter or half hour, according to requirements.

The American committee has asked the French organizing committee for accommodations for about 100 athletes at the Olympic village being erected close to the stadium. Those athletes who are complete early in the day will stay in the village the preceding night, and a number of the substitutes, for whom accommodations cannot be found in the chateau, will remain in the village during the entire meet.

THEATRICAL NEWS OF THE WORLD

The Ulster Players

Special from Monitor Bureau

London, July 6. IRISHMEN, being by far the most imaginative and whimsical of the four races that inhabit Great Britain and Ireland, are playwrights and play-actors born. The child-like love of make-believe, inherent in their nature, draws many of them successfully to the stage, as one may realize by a single glance down the long list of our theatrical celebrities, from Peg Woffington and David Garrick through the Sheridans to Shaw.

A majority, almost, of the great names, are those of Irish men and women; and in recent years the Abbey Players of Dublin, by worthily interpreting, have encouraged, and even inspired, a school of dramatists whose work, though strictly local and national, has been of literary and dramatic value high enough to bring the modern Irish theater into great and deserved renown.

Theater Too Large

That being so, the coming of the Ulster Players, on a first visit to London, with their own plays, written, staged, and dressed by themselves, was bound to arouse considerable curiosity. We did not, of course, expect quite the Dublin standard and distinction, either in plays or players. Synge and Lady Gregory are rare products indeed, and the very word Ulster suggests, to an Englishman at least, an admixture of Scottish shrewdness and downiness not quite consonant with the wistful poetry and glamor, the irresponsible whimsicality, and the sometimes tragical ferocity of the typical Irish theatrical tradition.

Now I have seen four plays by these actors from Belfast—"The Drone," a comedy; "Thompson in Tir-na-Nog," a fantasy; "The Troth," a tragedy; and "The Throback," a "super-natural" farce. Excepting the fantasy, which—by reason of exuberant dialect, indistinct speech, and a plethora of local and national allusion—was rather beyond a London audience, I enjoyed them all, and should have done so still more had they been played in a theater better suited to such work. The Scala is a large house, and its acoustic properties not being very good, the actors found it hard to get the pitch of the theater. Some spoke too loudly, others more loudly not distinctly enough, with the result that much intimacy of effect, so essential to the full enjoyment of these Irish plays, was lost. Such a house as the Court would be better suited to the requirements and capacities of the company.

Lack Celtic Charm

These four plays, nevertheless—they will have presented six in all—give one a very fair idea of the Ulster Players' worth. As dramatic authors they have the usual merits, and demerits, of the actor—an instinctive sense of the theater, as regards character, situation and business, to set against a lack of outstanding literary ability, and a rather distressing tendency to use clichés and outworn popular tags of speech. Their plays seem to have at least as much contrivance in them as invention, and while full of humor, albeit of a somewhat crude sort, lack the subtlety, the magic, the poetry, and much of the Celtic charm that the name of the Abbey Theater evokes.

Indeed, it is remarkable that the play in which these Ulstermen seemed to me to obtain the greatest measure of success was also the one in which they approached nearest to the manner of the Dublin school: I refer to the comedy entitled "The Drone," written by the cleverest dramatist in the company—and also one of its best players—Mr. Rutherford Mayne, whose acting style is slightly reminiscent of Mr. Arthur Sinclair. "The Drone" is a whimsical comedy, typically Irish in conception, and based, as are so many of its kind, "The Playboy" among them—on the attribution, to a very ordinary person, by the inventive Irish mentality, of certain quite imaginary qualities, to which the individual, supposed to be endowed with them, may, or may not, lay claim.

A New Use for Inventions

In this case he does lay claim; the impostor being Daniel Murray, brother of a farmer, John Murray, upon whose charity, which he does most effectively, on the pretext of perfecting certain mechanical and apocryphal "inventions," John, with an eye to domestic economies, offers marriage to the sister of a neighboring farmer, but soon repenting of his engagement, breaks it off, and Daniel, who has been away, at John's expense, returns, armed with a wonderful new "working bellows," just in time to hear of a pending action for breach of promise. The inventor, having "a great head on him," is naturally commissioned by his brother to settle the affair, which he does most effectively, by inducing the lady's representative to sign a contract accepting the rights in his new invention, in full settlement of her claim! So Daniel proved himself a genius after all; and justified the family faith.

The part of Daniel was cleverly and humorously played by Mr. Gerald Macnamara, who is the author of two of the other plays produced, including a three-act farce, "The Throback," of which the greater part, conceived in the legitimate vein of farce, which he does most effectively, by inducing the lady's representative to sign a contract accepting the rights in his new invention, in full settlement of her claim! So Daniel proved himself a genius after all; and justified the family faith.

not knowing a thing regarding her past. The mystery of this past, which causes part of the dramatic conflict in the story is cleared up for the audience at the finish of the picture. The girl has simply been standing by her father, who had been unjustly serving a term in prison. There is, of course, a handsome son of one of the white-haired men; the "legacy" finally goes to him.

"Three Wise Fools" is beautifully mounted and acted by a most capable group of players. William H. Crane, Claude Gillingwater and Alec Francis play the title roles and give finished performances. Eleanor Boardman has a beautiful and delicately sensitive face for screen work of the best

An Analysis of Tilla Durieux's Art

Special from Monitor Bureau

London, July 10. TILLA DURIEX is one of the best of modern German actresses, and she is the very best of the German actresses of old-fashioned modern women—the women of Ibsen and Strindberg. Perhaps it is because her stage personality, as it detaches itself before an observer who follows her work through several roles, is rather like one's idea of these women. That is, she is not beautiful, nor does she ever make much of her personal quality and her performance of the part of Sydney Fairchild is most appealing. William Haines is the handsome and manly sweetheart and plays convincingly. "Three Wise Fools" is a worth-while photoplay, well done in every particular.

"The Purple Highway"

Rialto Theater, week beginning July 22, 1923. Kenma Corporation presents "The Purple Highway," with Madge Kennedy.

This is a pleasant little photoplay of sentiment. It tells the story of the struggles of a young artist of the theater to acquire first, an understanding of, and then a recognition in, the theater in New York. Miss Kennedy plays the part of a young stage aspirant who has two loyal friends, one a playwright, the other a musician.

The successful musical play is finally written and produced with the girl in the leading role. Success comes to all three, but the expected happiness is momentarily suspended while the girl has to choose between the waster of a millionaire her success has brought to her feet and the faithful playwright friend who stood by her during her struggles. Needless to say, she chooses the latter and lest anyone shall be disappointed, and for good measure, the authors have arranged that the young playwright turns out to be very wealthy himself.

charm, though she makes a great deal of her animal strength and spontaneity. Nor does she seem to have any personal vanity, but instead much self-consciousness, and respect for her own vigorous intellect. Her voice is not lovely, or even melodious, and she never tries to make music with it—instead she speaks with harsh emphasis, sometimes almost in jerks.

But Tilla Durieux, though primarily an actress of realistic and intellectual drama, does not, like Alexander Moissi, for example, act to us with her intellect. It is her body that moves us most strongly, and gives us the key to her mood. It works first. Its nerves and muscles snap with the excitement of the moment, or compose themselves under relief. And then—following—come her thoughts. Moreover, her emotional flexibility is extraordinary, as she swings swiftly from one mood to another with this intense nervous energy and variety of movement and gesture.

Consider her in one of her most interesting roles—that of Rebecca West in "Rosmersholm." Her agitation is so great during the whole of this play that, looking back, one cannot remember a single "moment," separable line, or outstanding piece of "business." For she rarely tries to get effects by pausing; nor does she condescend to pose, as, for example, Nazimova does in her Ibsen roles. No. Instead she goes right on, rushing through the accumulating crises of the drama; and the result is that one remembers only a series of scenes in which there is no memory at all of just how she looked or spoke, but an unforgettable memory of a woman passing through a few hours of life with a tragic and terrifying fervor.

Yes, it is a fierce, restless sort of acting, this. Unbeautiful, if you will. Certainly Tilla Durieux's Rebecca West is an unbeautiful person. And at times almost unbearable, in her over-agitated energy.

And how her emotion hurries her body! Often, when Rosmer is speaking, she is so anxious to say what she has to say that her throat is taut and her mouth half-opens, and it seems that she will never wait until her cue comes. Cue? One could only use the word remembering "Rosmersholm" in tranquility, for at the time one forgets the existence of such things as cues. This Rebecca West either has something to say that must be said irrespective of whether it is her turn to speak or not, or she is listening and thinking, during a moment's repose, with the air of never intending to speak again at all.

But if this type of acting is not exactly beautiful to contemplate detachedly, Tilla Durieux's manipulation of it, as she composes her role, is—like all careful craftsmanship—very beautiful indeed. For the technical difficulty in "Rosmersholm" is that the agitation of Rebecca West, as she lifts layer after layer of the steel sheeting in which she has wrapped herself, must not only last through four acts, but must grow greater always. Tilla Durieux can meet this challenge more magnificently than can any other modern emotional actress the present writer has ever seen. For there is so much light and shade in her work that, swiftly though she modulates from one emotion to another, the memory of the last mood endures, and strengthens the newer one. There is so much variety that the same gesture or intonation is never repeated to express a different feeling—thus becoming a mannerism. And all this careful composition makes an emotional movement and development, not a series of excited emotions tumbling over each other. The result is that this actress not only prolongs the anguish she is going through during the four acts, but she keeps its moods always varying, accumulating, intensifying—like something musical—until the tragedy breaks full.

Rumanian Players on French Stage

Paris, June 29

Special Correspondence.
FOR the first time, Rumanian artists have appeared on a French stage to play a Rumanian drama in their national language. This initiative was not without danger. The Parisian public is sometimes singularly lazy when it is put in presence of unconsecrated foreign manifestations. French authors are loved and welcomed in Rumania. The curiosity and sympathy provoked in Paris by these Rumanian representations lacked in promptness and extension. It is a pity. All those who were actually present at the performances could not do otherwise than take the most vivid interest in these spectacles and greatly admire the powerful acting, the pathetic sincerity, of the Rumanian comedians.

The play given by the Bucharest company on the stage of the Théâtre de l'Œuvre was entitled "La Passion Rouge." Its author is M. Mihail Dorbul. It is a work in which the tragic vein reaches wildness. It is the exasperated conflict between the habits of daily social life and the unchained instinct which pursues its immediate exigencies beyond reason and grief. It is a disconcerting mixture of delicacy and ruffianism. There is a reminiscence of certain Tolstoyan dramas and an evocation of some of Ibsen's pieces.

"La Passion Rouge" was played remarkably well. Mme. Elvire Popesco, the director of the troupe, played the redoubtable Tophana, the beautiful and intelligent student girl. She was a revelation to Parisians. No actress has more authority and variety. She

"Dangerous People"

Special from Monitor Bureau

CHICAGO, July 20—Cort Theater, H. H. Frazee, presents "Dangerous People," a play in three acts by Oliver White, direction of O. P. Heggie. The cast:

Eileen Virginia Hammond
Ethel Frances Howard
David George Parsons
Teasdale Pierre Watkin
Paul William Courtenay

Judge Hook of Kansas carried about with him a suitcase containing a revolver. When he desired complete relaxation, he would follow hour after hour the irrational exploits of this hero. There is considerable entertainment, especially in hot weather, in contemplating real people as they go through a situation unconsciously by other motives than furnishing surprise, humor and material for a new turn of action. The characters, not quite sure whether they are real, and whether they belong to farce or serious drama, force no heated discussions upon the contemplator; he is delightedly placated in his amusement over the antics of the quast-puppets.

"Dangerous People" evokes a similar attitude. Even the scene designer helps the observer out. The opulent apartment overlooking Central Park, renting, we feel, for no less than $12,000 a year, belongs to a bank cashier, who, if he need not count his pennies, does count his dollars. The red lacquer and silver furnishings, with black draperies of the newest mode, are supported by baronial chairs, originally oak, one of which is covered by a new Broadwayish existence under a coat of red paint, which covers even the ramping lion on the black panel of upholstery. The "little house in the country," "fit for a millionaire," called a bungalow on the program, without even a caretaker in charge, has but one living room, and this doubt is a function. Black rattan chairs with orange upholstery repose comfortably in a room of gray stone walls, ornamented with panels of green lattice work, and great green doors in massive black marble frames.

Are the characters playing farce or melodrama? We are not sure—neither are they. They are, however, personable and the ladies are exquisite. We are not sure, either, that they have always been good people, but we do know that all but the "detective" have hearts of gold. Thus we enjoy seeing the newly-married and reformed thief, Mr. Courtenay, in the elegance of top hat and morning clothes, returning to the cashier the money stolen from his bank, and we chortle over the cashier's use of his wife's fear that her husband is a thief to get her to run away to the country with him, the country that she abhors and he adores. Nor does our hot weather interest subside when

"Three Wise Fools"

Special from Monitor Bureau

NEW YORK, July 23—Excellent entertainment is being offered at the Capitol Theater. S. L. Rothafel's ability to assemble a fine program is too well known to require lengthy comment at this time, but it does seem that he has an especially attractive bill this week.

The program starts with Chabrier's "España," excellently rendered by the Capitol orchestra, under the baton of Erno Rapee, followed by the Cuban pianist, Ernesto Lecuona. An attractive ballet is danced by Mlle. Gambarelli and the ballet corps, and then three members of the broadcasting studio, Evalyn Herbert, soprano; Rogelio Baldreich, tenor, and Greek Evans, baritone, all three of whom have well-trained voices, sing operatic and other selections. There are the usual news of the week pictures, most interesting, and the Lyman H. Howe "hodge-podge," which is the only unattractive number on the bill, but, fortunately, occupies only a few minutes. The program ends with Austin Strong's "Three Wise Fools."

"Three Wise Fools" tells the story of three elderly and wealthy men who have inherited jointly the daughter of the girl all three have loved in their youth. Their foolishness consists of the devotion they lavish upon their legacy. They have taken her on faith,

Mazzini and Goethe and Byron

MAZZINI'S essay on Byron and Goethe is a classic. It is not merely that he pictures the two figures with vividness and with flashes of rare intuition, but that he shows us how the age was interpreted in these two careers. "Byron and Goethe summed up." This is at once the philosophical explanation of their works and the secret of their popularity. The spirit of an entire epoch of the European world became incarnate in them. And the two are taken together because they are so different, while each is the perfect supplement of the other. The characteristic note of the age, according to Mazzini, is individuality; but whereas for Byron it was the expression of the internal or subjective, for Goethe, it was the external and objective. In Byron he sees the poet of unity, in Goethe of details, of "analysis not synthesis." Goethe successively absorbs his own personality in each of the objects he reproduces. Byron stamps every object he portrays with his own individuality. To Goethe nature is a symphony, to Byron a prelude.

That the sympathy of the ardent young Italian patriot should be more with the intensity and fervor of Byron than with the "Olympian calm" of Goethe is to be expected. The striking thing is that this sympathy does not prevent his viewing the two with impartiality and with a depth of discernment which is surprising.

Both Goethe and Byron, Mazzini believes, have suffered a temporary eclipse with the general public. It is interesting to us to see the relative importance of these two at the present day and hour. The dispassionate critic will probably admit that Byron has lost and Goethe has gained in the years that have passed since Mazzini's day. Byron will always have power to thrill the eager, the young, the imaginative, but after the first excitement the interest subsides somewhat. Perhaps Goethe himself can best explain this subsidence: he was one who fell under the sway of Byron's stirring power; he regarded him ever with affectionate admiration, but an admiration that did not blind him to the poet's faults.

"When he reflects, he is a child," says Goethe. It is, in truth, just this lack of reflective power that deprives his actually fine, vigorous work of the lasting appeal that we find in Goethe himself. And yet the poet who so inspired Tennyson, Goethe, and many of the greatest writers of his day deserves a higher place in literature than the present day is according him. Arnold himself realized the limitations, but he realized, too, the great potency of the man when he wrote:

"He taught us little, but our soul
Had felt him like a thunder roll."

But if the fame of Byron is passing under a temporary cloud, that of Goethe is surely in the ascendant. And the reasons for this rise are not far to seek. For one thing, there is the cosmopolitanism of Goethe. Though a German, he fell under French influence early in his life, when French officers in time of war were quartered in his home town of Frankfurt. His interest in the Bible, Hebrew letters, the Jews as a race, his appreciation for the art of the Greeks, his enthusiasm for Dutch and Italian painting, above all his wide sympathy and tolerance, mark him for the true citizen of the world. The versatility and breadth of his interests was extraordinary, his capacity for friendships, his eagerness for ideas. Under the influence of Byronism, he produced his "Werther," a sentimental tale so typical of the prevailing movement of the day that Wertherism became a familiar term for the whole movement. It is amazing to read how Goethe came to do test his own book when he had outgrown the mood and had been pestered by letters of insipid admirers.

It was his love of beauty, whether in the Greek mythology, the Middle Ages, or the actual life of the present which was his guiding star. The story of the friendship with Schiller, a personality as different as possible, was a fruitful one. "My relations with Schiller," he writes, "rested on the decided tendency for both of us toward a single aim, and our common activity rested on the diversity of the means by which we endeavored to attain that aim." The greatness of both men shines through this friendship and has made it one of the most illuminating in history.

What delightful reading it is because of his breadth of interests. Take his Italian letters, for instance. Goethe's dream for many years had been to see Rome, and the Italian journey was so memorable that it has often been regarded as a turning-point, as a great awakening experience. The letters are good reading, partly because of this enthusiasm, partly because of their pleasant discursiveness; he observed so much; he loved painting and sculpture, of course, and moonlight on the Coliseum. But he loved also to spend hours at the theater or opera; he made a study of plants and rocks and sea-groves; he delighted in different types of men.

But apart from the wealth of temperament which he displays, he might not have been so well known in England had it not been for such men as Carlyle and Arnold. Carlyle was, of course, one of the first interpreters of German literature to the English people. In the case of Arnold, it was a kind of kinship of nature; one might imagine that the very poise and self-control and disinterestedness of Goethe had passed into Arnold's being. But with Carlyle, it seems at the outset an attraction of opposites. Nothing could be farther from the frigid and excitable Carlyle than the calm, dispassionate Goethe. And Carlyle was great enough to see the shortcomings of himself and his age, and the need of Goethe as a corrective. "Perhaps the most familiar passage is in 'Sartor Resartus,' where before a quotation from 'Wilhelm Meister,' he exclaims, 'Close thy Byron; open thy Goethe.' But what attracts him most is not the dispassionate fairness, but rather those qualities of stern self-mastery and self-control, as opposed to the indulgence of Byron."

In his "Maxims," Goethe writes "How can a man come to know himself? Never by thinking but by doing. Try to do your duty, and you will know at once what you are worth. But what is your duty? The claims of the day."

Can there be any doubt that Carlyle had these words in memory when he said:

"Hence too the folly of that impossible precept, 'Know thyself!' till it be translated into this partially possible one, 'Know what thou canst work at.'"

"Do the duty which lies nearest thee, which thou knowest to be a duty! The second duty will already have become clearer."

In Goethe we see a teacher and prophet—one who speaks in various tongues to various men. Those who love poise, self-mastery, strength, can find it in Goethe. Those also who seek enlightenment, power of vision, culture in the high sense, can find those, too, in the teacher who, in Weimar, "rose like a star in the heavens."

To Build a Ship

Written for The Christian Science Monitor
Upon a low green hill beside the sea
I spend the hours in watching ships go by—
Tall ships with snowy sails and masts so high
They touch the sky, or little boats so wee
Like silver gulls afloat, they seem to me:
Stern battleships cruise by; I wonder why
They always leave a smudge upon the sky.
And every motor boat is a bumble bee.
But all day long as ships their courses ply,
Upon my face I feel the wind, the spray,
And deep within my heart there comes the cry,
"Up! Build your ship from dreams you throw away,
And launch it on the hour wherever you are."
But let your compass always be a star.
Beth Cheney Nichols.

La Qualité de la Bienveillance

Traduction de l'article anglais de Science Chrétienne paraissant sur cette page

ON a associé depuis longtemps l'abbaye de Tintern et les bords de la rivière du Wye avec quelques belles "Lignes" qui furent composées par le poète Wordsworth. On se rappelle promptement du poème qui contient ces lignes en lisant ce passage bien connu que nous en extrayons:

"Cette meilleure partie de la vie d'un homme de bien—
Ses moindres actes, sans nous, oubliés,
De bienveillance et d'amour."
La bienveillance est une des manifestations de la bonté. C'est la bonne volonté que l'on montre envers les autres. On est bienveillant quand on désire voir les autres heureux. Des mots bienveillants, de petites politesses, une considération prévenante pour ceux qui sont autour de nous, ont une valeur inestimable en ce qu'ils apportent le bien-être et le bonheur dans la vie journalière. La bienveillance est comme le soleil, si vitale que, sans elle, on ne saurait subsister longtemps. Comme les jours sont sujets à être tristes lorsque les nuages et les orages obscurcissent le soleil! Mais un esprit qui trouve toujours à redire, un caractère désagréable, ne peut pas être bienveillant. La bienveillance est la paix mentale que ne le sont les perturbations atmosphériques. Ils glacent le cœur, assombrissent le foyer, bannissent la joie, nous convainquant que Hannah More exprime la vérité lorsqu'elle dit: "Une petite malveillance est une grande offense."

Le mot "kindness" (bienveillance) caractérise tout particulièrement la langue anglaise. Ce mot est d'origine anglo-saxonne et dérive de l'adjectif "kind" qui signifie "ayant des sentiments qui conviennent à une nature commune; qui rappellent une communauté de race." Il est étroitement allié aux mots anglais "kin" et "kindred," personnes de la même race, ainsi qu'avec le mot allemand "kinder" qui signifie "enfants." Il a de nombreux synonymes qui dérivent pour la plupart d'autres langues; mais le mot "kindness" appartient si complètement au langage anglo-saxon que, semblable aux premiers bégalements de l'enfant dans sa langue natale, il semble toucher les fibres mêmes du cœur. Shakespeare fait de la bienveillance une qualité universelle et innée, lorsqu'il parle du "lait de la bienveillance humaine;" et il n'est pas surprenant que cette qualité soit mentionnée dans le dernier chapitre du livre des Proverbes comme étant une des vertus du type parfait de la femme, en ces termes: "Des instructions aimables sont sur ses lèvres." Si, donc, la qualité de la bienveillance est une loi, elle devrait être généralement acceptée comme règle de conduite pour tous, hommes et femmes, et devenir la "meilleure partie" de la vie de chacun. Il en serait sans doute ainsi, si l'on comprenait que la bienveillance est la bonté spirituelle, opérant par la loi divine. La bienveillance, étant l'expression de la bonne volonté, c'est-à-dire de la

The Quality of Kindness

Written for The Christian Science Monitor

TINTERN ABBEY and the banks of the River Wye have long been associated with some beautiful "Lines" which were composed there by the poet Wordsworth. The poem which contains them will most readily be recalled by a familiar quotation from it:—

"That best portion of a good man's life,
His little, nameless, unremembered
Of kindness and of love."

Kindness is one of the manifestations of goodness. It is good-will being expressed to others. One is kind who desires to see others happy. Kind words, small courtesies, thoughtful consideration for those about us, are of priceless value in bringing comfort and happiness into daily life. Kindness is like sunshine, so vital that we could not long endure without it. How dreary the days are apt to be when clouds and storms obscure the sun! More trying, however, than atmospheric disturbances to one's mental peace, are a fault-finding spirit and a disagreeable temper. They chill the heart, darken the home, banish gladness, convincing one that Hannah More spoke the truth when she said, "A small unkindness is a great offence."

The word "kindness" is peculiarly characteristic of the English language. It is of Anglo-Saxon origin, and comes from the adjective "kind," which means, "having feelings befitting a common nature; recognizing a community of race." It is closely allied to the words "kin" and "kindred," persons of the same race; and with the German "kinder," meaning children. It has a score of synonyms, derived from the most part from other languages; but the word "kindness" belongs so completely to our Anglo-Saxon speech that, like the first lisping of our mother-tongue, it seems to touch the very heartstrings of our being. Shakespeare makes kindness a universal, inborn quality when he speaks of "the milk of human kindness;" and we are not surprised that mention is made of it as one of the virtues of the perfect type of woman, in the last chapter of Proverbs, in the words, "In her tongue is the law of kindness." If, then, the quality of kindness be a law, it should become the generally accepted rule of conduct for all men and women, and should be the "best portion" of every one's life. This undoubtedly would be the case if kindness were understood to be spiritual goodness, operating through divine law.

Kindness, being the expression of good-will, or God's will, it is that through which God manifests His love. "Because thy lovingkindness is better than life, my lips shall praise thee," King David declares in one of the Psalms. The prophet Jeremiah, also, writes, "The Lord hath appeared of old unto me, saying, Yes, I have loved thee with an everlasting love: therefore with lovingkindness have I drawn thee." Jesus' mission was to show forth the love of God as a father's love, and to teach men to love one another as brethren. He showed how the law of kindness could be made practical, not only in the manner generally designated as "human kindness," but in a higher and more spiritual way, through healing the sick and overcoming every form of error that would oppose itself to the manifestation of the heavenly Father's loving-kindness for His children. Speaking of the wonderful manner in which Jesus conquered all the beliefs of the flesh, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, Mary Baker Eddy, says in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 54): "Through the magnitude of his human life, he demonstrated the divine Life. Out of the amplitude of his pure affection, he defined Love. With the influence of Truth, he vanquished error. The world acknowledged not his righteousness, seeing it not; but earth received the harmony his glorified example introduced."

To follow Jesus' example it is necessary to have his understanding of the divine law of kindness, and of the way it operates in human affairs. How important this may be seen from a study of the religious Tenets of Christian Science, one of which is as follows: "And we solemnly promise to watch, and pray for that Mind to be in us which was also in Christ Jesus; to do unto others as we would have them do unto us; and to be merciful, just, and pure" (Science and Health, p. 497). The Mind of Christ is made manifest in right thinking. Unkind thoughts do not belong to it; neither does unkind criticism find a place there. Deceit, dishonesty, disregard of divine law, indifference to the rights of others, lack of sympathy for the afflicted, cruelty—these disagreeable characteristics of the so-called carnal nature cannot enter the Christ-mind; nor do they demonstrate the law of kindness. Christian Science also teaches that those who would heal the sick and minister to the sorrowing have especial need to be kind, patient, and loving, so that through the heavenly Father's loving-kindness, spiritually perceived and humanly expressed, they may lead all mankind to see that "earth has no sorrow but Love can remove."

Each day my being sings and re-echoes
One sweet thought: I am so grateful
For my work.
Today while searching in the woods
For marigolds—
Marsh marigolds, I heard the wood thrush sing,
Conscious of naught but joy and freedom and
Nature's constant unfoldment of life and good.
So is it with my work. Treasures of thought
And wakened feelings in childhood hearts refresh
With pointed sweetness each new day.
And so
My being sings and re-echoes this sweet thought:
I am so grateful for my work.

Bellagio's Blue Mirror

Little white and pink houses were peering down into the blue surface of Lake Como, as we stood upon a truncated wharf of Bellagio. These ancient homes studied the hill at the foot of the Alps, one on top of the other, like gems in its emerald side, their reflections stretching across the blue basin beneath our feet.
Tawny brown Italian sailors in white blouses and red sashes, black blouses and sashes, but all with nondescript trousers, waited at the end of the wharf to compete for the privilege of rowing us across the lake to Tremezzo, which also trembled in the surface on the other side. The sailors smiled agreeably, each endeavoring to earn the fare across, and holding their white barks close to the edge of the pier. Some of the little boats persisted in dancing on the ripples, adding their patches of moving colors, their striped awnings and gay tones, to the symphony.
Luxurious gardens enriched the houses on the hill, and the brown women passing on the shore, with large colored handkerchiefs tied over their black hair and beneath their chins, introduced soft tones into the landscape. Ripples continued to splash about the white wall that stretched along the land, while intense sunlight revealed all the color in every object, the rays beating a gold into each shade that glittered around the mirror. Fragments of color showed like bits of brittle particularized glass.
Contentment spread like a mantle over the sunny, peaceful scene. There was an engaging nonchalance even in the rivalry of the rowers and keepers of little barks around the pier.
As we stood, reflected shadows in the smiling blue, the tinkle of chimes floated over hillside and wave, adding a rich accompaniment to the deep musical voices of the boatmen. Melody unbroken, dwindling off in the distance across the lake! Sounds drifting in the sunshine, over blue water with golden tipped waves! And we also soon were drifting along, to the rippling splash of the oars and the broad happy smile of the boatman, towards Tremezzo, accompanied by the symphony of harmonious sounds and colors.

For "Law— Not War"

THAT is a sane and constructive method adopted by the National Council for the Prevention of War to make vibrant and audible the growing sentiment in the United States in favor of outlawing war. Two days, July 28 and 29, have been set apart to be observed nationally as "Law—Not War Day." Preparations have been made for a general observance of the occasion, which will provide an opportunity for those who choose to express their views, and thus to urge the adoption of means offered for the adjustment of international differences.

There is no doubt that in the United States there exists today, as there has existed since the fateful days of 1914, an overwhelming conviction that a way must be found to render absolutely impossible the resort to armed force. Yet it has not seemed possible to impress upon those to whom authority has been delegated the overwhelming and insistent need as the people see it. Partisan selfishness has postponed the adoption of proposed methods, and the hope of penalizing those who had the effrontery to propose what have come to be regarded as really constructive plans has created party or factional divisions upon an issue regarding which it would seem there should be no two opinions. The great need at the moment, then, seems to be that the people speak so clearly and so emphatically that no one can possibly misunderstand their demand. As directly and as spontaneously as the people of the United States insisted upon the outlawing of slavery, as vociferously as they demanded the adoption of a national prohibition amendment to emancipate the slaves to drink, and just as they rose up finally to insist upon the extension of the franchise, they now must demand that law—not war—shall be the arbiter in future international disputes.

Has anyone a doubt as to the efficacy of such a concerted manifesto? Those politicians who have arrogated to themselves the privilege of deciding what the people need will be the first to hear the clear pronouncement. The President is conscious of the popular turning toward the World Court, and of the growing favor of even the League of Nations. No reactionary interference can long prevent forward action if the people will arouse themselves to the necessity of speaking for themselves. The occasion is provided for the taking of an unofficial but none the less decisive referendum upon the most important question in the world today. It is the duty of every man and woman and every boy and girl in the United States to carry the banner of civilization and progress in the onward march which begins on July 28-29.

IN THE course of the widespread newspaper discussion aroused by the Monitor's statistics showing 184.87 columns of space devoted by a number of American newspapers to reports of the prize fight at Shelby as against 3.33 given to the meeting of the National Education Conference at San Francisco, one comment is really suggestive. A critic in a middle western paper suggests that if the managers of the Educational Conference had taken half the pains to interest the public in the event which they were promoting that were taken by the promoters of the prize fight, the relative amount of attention aroused might have been very different.

The point is well taken. It may be commended to the attention of those who are seeking to awaken public interest in matters of such vital import as the education of youth. They seem to think that the mere announcement that a meeting having this end in view is to be held is all that is necessary. When promoters arrange for two pugilists to beat each other into insensibility, they begin months in advance to flood the press with items which, if not interesting, are made to appear so, concerning the prospects of the contest, the lives and habits of the contestants, the enormous sums expended in arranging for the event, the part it plays in pugilistic history, and the highly impressive character of the persons who are going to grace the ringside with their distinguished presence. An army of press agents is let loose and their contributions to the newspapers fill innumerable columns and even more countless wastebaskets. Every resource of what has become one of the most alert and intelligent of occupations, namely, "press agenting," is employed to pique and to stimulate public curiosity. The newspapers, which as a rule turn a cold shoulder upon applicants for free space of this character, or refer them to the advertising manager, become infected with the enthusiasm of the publicity agents and give freely hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of advertising space to an event of utterly no importance whatsoever. The end is attained. The public is educated to believe that it is more interested in a prize fight than in anything else in the world. As a result of this artificially stimulated interest, the newspapers sell several hundreds of thousands of copies on the day of the fight, and sometimes a few promoters make a lot of money out of the event. At Shelby, it will be remembered, everybody, including three of the banks of the little town, went broke.

Surely the education of the children of the Nation is not a matter of such utter unimportance to its people that the press cannot be persuaded to take an active and intelligent interest in a gathering intended to advance educational interests. We are inclined to agree with the newspaper critic who laid some of the blame for the disparity in volume between prize fight news and pedagogical news to the indifference of the promoters of the latter to methods of awakening journalistic interest. Perhaps the lesson may have its value in future to the managers of the National Education Association.

SENATOR FERRIS of Michigan, being neighbor to Henry Ford, speaks with courtesy, if not with conviction, concerning the latter's presidential candidacy. Michigan Democrats are not for Ford, the Senator thinks; they are for McAdoo. But he goes on to say that if Mr. Ford would announce himself a member of the Democratic Party, he could no doubt get the Michigan delegates. This recalls a comparatively recent incident in American political history. About four years ago Mr. Herbert Hoover was an up-and-coming candidate for a presidential nomination—by either party. He had done amazingly efficient work in administering relief funds in Europe after the war. He had shown himself to be an organizer of extraordinary capacity. He had a host of friends in the United States, and the machinery of his American Relief Association, like the machinery of Ford's flivver-selling association, could readily be turned into a political organization. No man at the moment appealed so much to the public imagination, none had so much space in the newspapers or the magazines. So long as he was silent as to his party affiliations, his candidacy ran as smoothly as Niagara above the rapids—and as resistlessly. Pictures of Hoover, eulogies of his qualities, and happy prognostications of his political future filled actual acres of type.

In the end Mr. Hoover's high water mark in the Republican Convention was seventeen votes. In the Democratic convention his name was not mentioned at all. Up to a very few months prior to the meeting of these two gatherings, the managers of each party were sorely distressed lest the rival organization should seize upon Hoover as a candidate. So long as he kept silence as to his party affiliations he was at once a menace and a promise to each. The Democrats, having set the date of their convention late, were in deadly fear lest the Republicans should nominate Hoover first. The Republicans, for their part, were dismally apprehensive that if they did not nominate Hoover, the Democrats would.

How the matter was settled was picturesquely told on the golf links at Chevy Chase by a Republican Senator, one of the group that afterward nominated Harding at Chicago. Talking with a Democrat who happened to be playing with him, he said very frankly, "Hoover's a fine man. We think very highly of him. He has done everything that the party organization could ask of him. We asked him to say that he always had been a Republican and he has done so. We asked him to say that he would accept the Republican nomination if proffered, and he has acquiesced. We asked him to make it clear that under no circumstances would he accept the Democratic nomination and this he has announced. Having done all that we asked him to do, he doesn't interest us any further and we need not bother with him any more."

They did not "bother." Seventeen votes marked his accomplishment in the convention of the party to which he gave his adhesion. We have no desire to advise Mr. Ford nor to advance his interests, but the anecdote is not without pertinence to his case.

"REHABILITATION by co-operation" is the keynote of the railroad policy devised for the New England states by the special joint committee of thirty appointed by the six governors. Because of the provisions of the Federal Transportation Act of 1920 for consolidation of the railroads into several group systems, this committee was created, first, to study the question of consolidation from New England's viewpoint, and, second, to attempt to find an answer to the existing questions of transportation in the northeastern states.

Under the able chairmanship of James J. Storrow, and at no negligible personal sacrifice by Mr. Storrow and the other members of the committee, experts were retained, exhaustive inquiries made and extended hearings held. Out of ten months of work has come a report the authoritative nature of which cannot be disputed, however much individuals and groups may vary in view from the conclusions reached on the basis of the facts obtained. Perhaps the greatest service rendered by the committee may be in its having gathered and correlated these facts.

The committee has examined the New England railroads and, with the exception of the Boston & Maine and the New York, New Haven & Hartford, finds them soundly operated and financially competent. It is essential, then, the committee concludes, that all the roads be sound. It advances, therefore, a program for rehabilitation which requires the co-operation of bondholders in agreeing to a scaling down of bonds; of stockholders in raising additional funds; of the states in establishing a ten-year trusteeship and guaranteeing to rebate taxes in event of deficit; of the federal Government in reducing interest on obligations. Through this very definite plan the committee contends that the two railroads can, within a brief period, give proper service and pay interest on their obligations.

Soundness regained, the committee recommends, with the dissent of New Hampshire and the reluctant assent of Maine, that a New England group of railroads be established. It reaches this conclusion after careful consideration of the alternative proposals for amalgamation of the New England lines with trunk line railroads—an expedient which the committee feels would not result in benefit to New England in its economic and industrial future.

Attention is directed by the report to the question of water-borne transportation. The New England merchant is urged to revise his map and to use more intelligently the facilities of water and water-rail routes. The importance of forward-looking port development is stressed in connection with an analysis of existing conditions. In fact, the work of the committee provides an invaluable and understandable compendium of facts and figures on the whole broad question of transportation for New England.

This report commands attention. It is deserving of the most careful study by every legislator who may be called upon to pass upon any of its proposals. It merits equally searching consideration by every citizen who is in any way concerned with the railroad problems of New England or who holds theories for their solution. Conceivably, out of the admirable labors of the special committee and the constructive discussion that its work must inevitably inspire, will come a transportation policy worthy of the position of the New England states.

MAYOR HYLAN of New York has added his voice to those which have been raised in condemnation of the World Court. In a recent speech he is reported to have said: "The purpose of the League of Nations, as well as of the World Court, is none other than to secure America's entanglement in European affairs, in order that the manhood of America and the wealth of America may be drafted by the banking plunderbund to aid its further excursions for world domination, and to protect its loans and credits in a tottering European civilization."

In comment upon this, Hamilton Holt, editor of The Independent, declares, a little sadly, perhaps, that "during the last two weeks I have personally visited every member of the 'plunderbund' in New York who were in the syndicate of international bankers who subscribed $25,000,000 for the Austrian loan. This loan, of course, is a result of the steps initiated by the wicked League of Nations to save Austria from plunging over the abyss where Russia has already fallen. Thinking that these international bankers, who had presumably made a good commission out of the loan, would be glad to support substantially any efforts to induce America to enter the League of Nations, I had the temerity to ask each one for a contribution for the League of Nations Nonpartisan Association. I am sorry to say, however, that I did not get a red cent from any one of these bankers or banking institutions."

Thus, with popular phrases and a very loud voice, the Mayor goes marching on. The truth does not concern him. Why should it? The vote's the thing! Perhaps, after all, one of the surest methods of reaching a right conclusion for or against any such issue is to note carefully the types of individuals who line up on one side or on the other, and choose the crowd with which one would prefer to associate.

MUCH evidence in favor of co-operative organization for the marketing of Canadian wheat is being brought out before the Grain Inquiry Commission in the prairie provinces. The farmers are exercising common sense, too, in turning toward the plan of voluntary co-operative effort, in preference to continuing the demand for a Government wheat board. During exceptional war conditions, the marketing of grain through a federal Government agency, called the Canadian Wheat Board, served the farmers satisfactorily. But it has been found that the problem of reinstating the board under prevailing trade conditions is more than the Government authorities, either federal or provincial, can manage successfully.

The necessity of doing something to improve the system of merchandising the produce of western Canadian farms is generally conceded. Without co-operation among the producers, Canadian wheat is offered for sale at the very time when prices are falling, as the flood of grain is poured into the world market from United States and European sources, as well.

Experiments in self-help through the organization of a voluntary wheat pool are being tried out in other countries. The pooling system is regarded as a very advanced form of co-operation for the marketing of farm produce. But a careful study of the progress that has been made in Australia, New Zealand, Denmark, and other countries should help the Canadian farmers to start in right. The object of the voluntary pool is not to force up the world market price of wheat—Canadian farmers know better than to believe they can achieve any such monopoly influence on prices—but the elimination of some of the spread in price between producer and consumer. This is a legitimate object. It should be regarded favorably by public opinion in Canada. The importance of maintaining the agricultural industry on a prosperous basis is appreciated.

Editorial Notes

A CONTRACTOR recently was haled before the Little Rock (Ark.) Municipal Court for alleged cruelty to his teams. As was reported in the columns of this newspaper, he was sentenced to read "Black Beauty." Whatever may be said anent the unusual tempering of justice with mercy, there is no question but that it was "a novel" sentence.

AN INTERNATIONAL TRADE FAIR is to be held in Jugoslavia, Sept. 1 to 10, 1923. When the states of Central Europe not only recognize, but act upon, the fact that this territory comprises an economic unit, understanding relations between them will be more speedily and permanently established.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA, by dint of hard work and heavy taxation, is one of the few states of Europe in a sound financial condition. In 1922 the country's trade balance was favorable by 5,390,000,000 crowns, compared with 4,877,000,000 crowns in 1921. For a year of serious business depression, the showing is remarkable.

An American Sees Germany

PARIS, July 12—Potentially, Germany is today the most powerful European nation!

You ask, What right have I to make such a sweeping statement? It is the opinion of an ordinary man, American trained, with the ordinary amount of common sense, who has been studying conditions over here for the past year on a traveling scholarship from an American university, one who has visited ten European countries in that period and who has been into Germany twice.

I have just come back from a short trip to Berlin, returning via Holland and Belgium. As a result of what I saw with my own eyes, heard from persons there and read, my suspicion that Germany is the cleverest bulldozer in Europe was confirmed. I am convinced that Germany could pay the reparations. I am convinced that the French are morally right in going into the Ruhr; but, unfortunately, I am equally convinced that France has made a tragically false move.

It is all so simple. Follow my argument and I believe you will agree with me that it is accurate. The Germans are the most efficient people in the world. The Ruhr is their mechanical chief d'œuvre—the most perfectly organized and regulated piece of gigantic machinery that you will find anywhere. The French, at their wits' end and isolated by their allies (except Belgium) rode into the Ruhr on their Jeanne d'Arc charger and expected a miracle to follow. In their childish idealism they saw the busy mines, bringing up coal to fill fat cars for their use. They expected co-operation from the Germans when they hadn't succeeded in realizing it from their allies. Mistake number one. Their second chimera is even now breaking up. They expected to be able to run the organization of the Ruhr themselves. Who would allow a child to drive a high-powered automobile through crowded traffic? The poor French are doing their best. Six carloads of coal a day out of the Ruhr at present; prior to the French occupation sixty carloads were shipped out of that area per day!

The European situation is no joke. Said an Amsterdam merchant to me, "You say our prices are the highest in Europe. True; but we have been hit heavily and are not making money. Before the Ruhr crisis we had just begun to feel that the wound caused by the war had started to heal and that we could commence to plan for the future. Now it has been irritated and we don't know where we are."

I have tried to understand the situation. To prophesy the next step is beyond me. I sat through most of the sessions of the Third Congress of the League of Nations at Geneva last September. I am admittedly a pro-League man. But, League or no League, Europe has instant need of America. America's selfish isolation is intolerable any longer from the ordinary humanitarian point of view. I am no sloshy idealist, but just an ordinary man. Americans who read this probably wouldn't want to claim any higher honor for themselves than that, to be ordinary men and American citizens. The future is critical—perhaps not imminently, but most certainly.

I read in The Outlook some time ago an explanation of some of the signs of building activity in Germany. It was culled from an industrial chief in the Ruhr. He said that the Germans built today because it would be twice as expensive to build tomorrow. Another opinion holds that the Germans are putting every cent they can into things which the Reparations Commission and the French cannot touch. This seems more plausible. But, I don't believe either or both constitute a complete reply. On the great highway stretching from the Tier Garten, westward beyond Charlottenburg, I saw building activity that reminded me of Long Island and Westchester County. Elaborate dwellings, running on our estimate from $25,000 to $150,000 in value, were either newly built or in the process of construction all along the route. I must have counted 200 such houses.

I flew over the city in an airplane. I saw the race course massed with human beings that looked like ants about a lump of sugar. I saw yachts and motor boats by hundreds in the quiet reaches of the River Spree, which flows by the splendor of Potsdam. I saw the acres of orderly, new apartment houses. On the Amsterdam express I talked with a Dutch gentleman, commenting on what I had seen. "Huh," he ejaculated—"if you were surprised at what you saw in Berlin" (and I saw it, too, in southern Germany, about Munich), "then you would be astonished at what the Germans are doing in Amsterdam. Where they get the money I do not know, but they own the best banks in Amsterdam and they are buying up the best property in the city, and the most beautiful suburban homes, in guilders, mind you, not marks!"

So much for that, except to add that Berlin, with exchange then at 30,000 marks to the dollar, was as expensive for most things in which the tourist indulges as Paris or London. But no incivility! I would like to quash some of the newspaper tales of rough treatment to foreigners, and of difficulties in crossing the border. We were just ordinary travelers, we got our passport visas easily, our bags were not opened crossing into Germany, and not looked into coming out of the country. We encountered courteous treatment from everyone.

The future? I don't know, nor does anyone else. It looks a hopeless mess. Of course, it will straighten out somehow, sometime. And then, further off, there is likely to come another frightful cataclysm. It is to stave this off, or to prevent it for all time, that I make this appeal from a simple, ordinary man to a great nation to come down from its throne, walk among the people, teach them, help them, punish them, protect them and love them. America has a power so great today that it awes me to attempt to gauge its possibilities, if used in the right way.

I would like to see America call a conference of the Allied Powers to settle the reparations question once and for all, call Germany in, appoint a commission with full powers, back it up with an army, see that Germany pays what it justly can and what it justly owes, and remove the terrible hoodoo from European civilization. The result of such action is too great even to conjecture. R. A. C.

The Magic of the African Moon

THERE is a strange and compelling beauty, writes Louise de Forest Shelton in Our World, in the North African lands, between the great Sahara desert and the sea... something exotic and intriguing, that allures and fascinates, if you stay long enough to feel its seduction. A dream—a fantasy—an enchantment. As you walk through the magic of its moonlight—marvelous moonlight deluging the warm, velvet darkness, making sharp blue shadows on the gleaming white of the walls of discreetly shuttered houses—it has a mood and a meaning as piquant and pervasive and audacious in its subtle suggestion as though an artist had deliberately created it.
